R. N. Berrien, Jr., Denies Committing Crime

TROUBLES CAUSED BY ATLANTA BANK, SAYS DEFENDANT

Broker, on Trial for Embezzlement, Says Clerical Error Brought About Embarrassment.

OWES MONEY TO STATE AND WILL PAY, HE SAYS

W. V. Crowley Testifies That Berrien Had Been Guilty of Conducting System of "Kiting."

R. N. Berrien, charged with embezzling funds of the state entrusted to him in his handling of school warrants, made his statement to the jury Thursday afternoon. It was a total denial of any crime, of having fled from any crime, or of having had foreknowledge that criminal charges would be brought against him. He charged that an Atlanta bank's clerical error had caused his financial embarrassments and that that same bank's enmity has caused his prosecution. On this statement he rested his defense. He offered not a single witness.

In startling contrast to his statement was testimony of W. V. Crowley, cashier of the Citizens and Southern bank, of Atlanta, that while Berrien carried a large bank account with his institution and the Atlanta National, that the bankers had discovered that he was conducting a system of "kiting" that ran into the thousands, playing Atlanta National checks against Citizens & Southern checks to cover his real financial condition.

Mr. Crowley stated after the hearing that while Berrien did considerable business through his institution that he did not owe the bank any money, and that the bank had not lost a cent in its transaction with him. He also stated when Berrien left Atlanta he had a small balance to his credit which was later garnisheed by one of his creditors.

Recess Announced.

At the conclusion of the defendant's statement, Judge John D. Humphries, presiding over superior court, announced a recess until Friday morning when arguments of counsel will be heard. The case is expected to go to the jury before noon.

The courtroom was well-filled when Berrien took the stand to make his statement, immediately after the state had rested. He read his entire statement, which was his version of the complete history of the transactions between himself and the state. He carried numerous documents to the stand with him and gave evidence of his penchant for figures by reciting the number on various checks which he exhibited as well as the amounts involved.

He betrayed no nervousness on the stand save for continual fussing with his papers, which he seemed unable to keep in order.

After a detailed recital of his method of doing business he reached the beginning of his financial difficulties

Atlanta Jewish Relief Campaign Now Near Quota

Total of $89,754 Reported Raised in City at Meeting Thursday.

The Jewish relief campaign in Atlanta and all over Georgia Thursday made rapid strides toward a successful conclusion. A total of $89,754 was reported raised in Atlanta by Arthur I. Harris, city chairman, which represents an increase of almost $5,000 over the sum that had been raised Wednesday, Armand May, state chairman, announced that the total reported over the state was now $150,175, an increase of $20,000 over the amount reported Wednesday. Most of this increase represents the results of the first day's campaign in Savannah and nearby cities, together with the amount raised in Atlanta during the past two days.

The campaign closes everywhere in the state April 1, and a number of large cities like Savannah and Macon, which are just beginning their campaigns, have pledged themselves to raise their full quotas. According to Mr. May, this means that if Atlanta will complete the $10,000 remaining of its quota the entire state quota will be raised.

$100 Club.

New members of the $100 club, formed by persons in Atlanta increasing their subscriptions by $100, announced Thursday, included Maurice R. Hirsch, Isaac A. Haas, Arthur Heyman L. W. Rogers company, Armand May, Arthur I. Harris, A. D. G. Cohn and the workers of the relief headquarters, consisting of Miss Ida Goldstein, Miss Nan Cramer and Mrs. William Hellman.

The Methodist Sunday school class also sent in a subscription almost large enough to place it in the same class.

Four hundred dollars was reported Thursday from the Oriental section of Atlanta Jewry, chiefly from members of the Or V' Sholom synagogue. Mr. Harris congratulated them on this amount, saying it represented one of the largest amounts raised in proportion to the number and wealth of its subscribers.

New Subscriptions.

Other subscriptions of $50 or more announced Thursday include:

CHOATE CHARTER PLAN NOW READY FOR COUNCILMEN

Council-Director Form of Government for Atlanta Will Be Submitted at Next Meeting, April 4.

OBJECTION IS VOICED BY NUTTING AND WOOD

Two Members of Committee Will Ask That All Tentative Charters Be Submitted to People.

Agreement to submit the Choate charter providing for the so-called council-director form of government to council on April 4 was reached Thursday afternoon at a meeting of the joint committee of citizens and members of council recently appointed to draft a new charter for the city of Atlanta.

Councilman J. R. Nutting and J. O. Wood, two members of the committee who refused to support the Choate plan, announced their intention to file a minority report opposing the proposed charter, but urging that it be submitted to the people with other tentative charters which have been suggested.

The plan adopted by the committee is the idea of Herbert E. Choate, and provides for the separation of the executive and administrative functions of the city government from the legislative features, and for the concentration of executive responsibility in one single head.

Provisions of Charter.

It provides for a mayor to hold office for four years, and not to be eligible for re-election, and for one member of council from each ward.

Five general departments would be created, as follows: Department of law, department of finance, department of public safety, department of welfare and department of public works, each department to be headed by a director appointed by the mayor.

In a spirited speech Councilman J. R. Nutting attacked the Choate plan as dangerous and autocratic. He expressed the belief that the mayor would be given too much authority.

Councilman J. O. Wood read to the committee a number of proposed amendments to the present charter which he proposes to introduce in council at its next meeting. He stated the amendments would make the present charter very effective.

Proposed Amendments.

The proposed amendments provide:

That all boards and committees with the exception of the board of education and the library board, be abolished.

That the authority and powers of the abolished boards shall be vested in general council.

That general council shall supervise and be the administrative body of all departments, excepting that of education.

That each department shall have its chief but general council shall group said departments into six divisions to facilitate the government of the departments.

That general council shall have the power to create committees of members of the

SUBMARINE SINKS WITH ALL HANDS

British Underwater Craft Collides With Destroyer During Maneuvers. Twenty-Three on Board.

London, March 23.—(By the Associated Press.)—The British submarine H-42 has been lost with all hands in the Mediterranean, says an Exchange Telegraph dispatch from Gibralter today. She collided with a destroyer during maneuvers.

The destroyer was the Versatile. The latest naval list says the submarine, commanded by Lieutenant Douglas Sealey, had a complement of 23 men.

The British submarines of the "H" class were all built under the war emergency program, most of them in 1918-19. They are of the single hull "Holland" type modified by the admiralty, 164 1-2 to 171 feet long and 15 3-4 feet beam. They displace from 440 to 500 tons and are equipped with two sets of Diesel engines, giving a speed of 13 knots on the surface. They carry four torpedo tubes. Their ordinary complement is 22 men.

Wilson Confident Party Will Soon Regain Its Power

Former President Expresses Belief in a Telegram to Leader at Duluth.

Duluth, Minn., March 23.—Former President Woodrow Wilson, in a telegram to the chairman of the St. Louis county democratic committee today expressed "confident expectation that the party will soon be re-established in power and in a position to render renewed service to the liberal forces of mankind throughout the world."

The telegram was in reply to a wire sent Mr. Wilson by the county convention, in which the former president was "assured recognition as the leader of the democratic party." The telegram of the former president follows:

"Your message embodying Mr. Crasswoller's resolution has given me great cheer and encouragement. I hope you will have an opportunity to convey my greetings to the democrats of St. Louis county, together with an expression of my confident expectation in which no doubt they share that our great party will now soon be re-established in power and in a position to render renewed service to the liberal forces of mankind throughout the world."

Coxey May Lead Another "Army" To Capitol Hill

Has Presented Bills to Congress to Aid Unemployed, He Says.

Detroit, Mich., March 23.—"General" Jacob S. Coxey, of Massillon, Ohio, who led "Coxey's army" in the march on Washington in 1894, in the interest of economic legislation he sponsored, announced today that he was planning to gather followers for another drive on the capital, in an effort, he said, to induce congress to pass bills he has presented as offering aid in relieving unemployment.

Mr. Coxey said he has "four bills in congress now and two more in preparation, which will solve the economic problems of today, if congress will pass them."

"I am to have a conference next Wednesday on the most important of them—the legal tender money bill," he said. "I have promised the unemployed if this bill is not given proper consideration I will act. I will give congress time enough to consider carefully, then if the bill is not passed, I will issue a call."

Best News Service Yet, Says Radio Enthusiast

W. M. White, of Valley Head, Ala., completed his wireless phone set Wednesday afternoon late.

Wednesday night he was telling a large audience of an operation performed in a courtroom in Georgia, the first occurrence of its kind in the state. He was picking the story out of the air from 4 FT, the radio station of the Georgia Railway and Power company, broadcasting as The Atlanta Constitution, station WGM.

And Mr. White couldn't wait for a letter to tell the Radio Department of The Constitution about it. A telegram came from him Thursday telling about it.

"I heard all your market quotations and late news by my wireless receiving station that was completed late yesterday," his telegram reads. "I told an audience last night here of the operation in the Georgia courtroom. This makes the quickest news service yet had in DeKalb county, Alabama."

And that's the way The Constitution is receiving congratulations from radio amateurs on its service from WGM.

WGM has received so many letters and telegrams from radio amateurs who are nightly receiving The Constitution service that a feeling of intense friendliness has grown up between WGM and these amateurs.

People everywhere are receiving The Constitution's service clearly and distinctly.

GRADY PATIENTS NEGLECTED, SAY PROBE WITNESSES

Physician Tells Council Committee That Proper Attention Was Not Given to Patient He Attended.

CARELESS TREATMENT CHARGED BY WOMAN

Relatives of Chas. Schultz Testify to Calling Hospital to Learn Condition of His Wife.

Narrowing down the Schultz affair to a dispute between A. A. Lawson, night clerk at Grady hospital, and H. A. Dennard, a signal operator for the police department, as to whether a message of the death of Mrs. Schultz was given by the hospital to the police department, the investigating committee appointed by city council to consider complaints against the management of Grady hospital made considerable headway at its first session Thursday night.

After hearing all witnesses in the Schultz case and hearing testimony from other witnesses as to alleged negligence or carelessness at the hospital, the committee adjourned until Monday night at 7:30 o'clock.

The first complaint heard was from Charles A. Schultz, of 159 Jett street, who reiterated the charge he made before the hospital and charities committee of council that the hospital informed his relatives several hours after Mrs. Schultz had died in the morning of February 27 that the patient had spent a very good night and was doing well.

Mrs. McGehee Testifies.

Mrs. W. J. McGehee, a sister of Mrs. Schultz, told the committee that she had visited the patient at the hospital on Sunday night, February 26, and had found that she was suffering considerably. Between 9 and 10 o'clock Monday morning, she said, she telephoned to hospital and was told that "She rested very well during the night, and is doing nicely."

The family did not know of her death until Mr. Schultz and his sisters went to visit the patient at the hospital during Monday afternoon, it was testified.

Mrs. D. A. Brewer, clerk in charge of the information bureau at the hospital from 8 a. m. until 8 p. m., testified that she did not receive a telephone request during the day for information as to the condition of Mrs. Schultz.

Had Notified Lawson.

Miss Hesta Henderson, night superintendent of nurses stated that she had notfied A. A. Lawson, night clerk, of the death of Mrs. Schultz, at 2:30 o'clock, on the morning of February 27. Lawson testified that he called the police department and gave the signal operator the message, as is customary when immediate relatives of the patients have no phone. He said he recognized the voice which answered the call at police station as that of H. A. Dennard, signal operator on the morning watch.

He said that two hours later he called to ascertain if the signal operator had instructed the officer on the beat which includes Jett street to notify Mr. Schultz of the death of his wife, and was informed that he had.

Dennard, being sworn, testified that he received no such message from Lawson. He stated he had been on the police force for 21 years, and that

Father Is Acquitted Who Killed Own Son "To Save His Soul"

Chicago, March 23.—Frank Piano, Sr., who killed his son "to save his soul," was acquitted by a jury here late Thursday.

The father testified that his son was hanging around pool rooms with a gang of boys he feared would lead his boy into trouble. He tried to get the boy to come home with him one night when he found him with these boys. The son refused and the father shot and killed him.

The jury declared him insane when the crime was committed, but since recovered, insuring the father's discharge.

DAUGHERTY WARNS AGAINST VIOLENCE IN MINER STRIKE

Attorney-General Says Government Will Tolerate No Use of Violence to Stop Coal Production.

MINE UNION OFFICIAL SEES FEDERAL THREAT

Daugherty Says the Men Have Right to Strike, But Not to Interfere With Workers.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

Washington, March 23.—Warning that the federal government would tolerate no use of violence to prevent coal production during the threatened coal strike was issued today by Attorney-General Daugherty.

Mr. Daugherty declared he was making no threats and he believed a man, or a set of men, have the right to strike in an orderly manner, but they did not have the right to interfere with those who took their places.

The attorney-general did not disclose the government's plans for the miners' walk-out, but it was understood that he conferred yesterday with President Harding and Secretary Davis upon the possibility of a public appeal by the president to avert the strike.

WARNING SEEN AS THREAT.

Indianapolis, Ind., March 23.—Attorney-General Daugherty's warning to coal miners against violence during the strike set for April 1, was interpreted tonight by William Green, secretary-treasurer of the United Mine Workers as indicating, he said, that the forces of the government would be used against the strikers for the benefit of coal operators, who, he added, "constitute the only group which thus far has committed violence.'

"The only impression which can be obtained from an analysis of the attitude of the government," he said in a statement, "is that if necessary the miners will be coerced and the forces of government will be used against them in order to guarantee production of coal, but the coal operators may commit violence by refusing to carry out their contract and at the same time receive the protection of the government."

In addition to this statement replying to the attorney-general, Mr. Green announced that the strike vote cast by soft coal miners this month, showed 95 per cent of the miners in favor of the wallkout April 1, unless a new wage agreement had been made by that date. The exact vote was not anounced but it was understood that approximately 300,000 miners participated in the referendum. Every soft coal field, Mr. Green said, favored the strike.

In his statement Mr. Green said:

Warning Premature.

"The attorney-general of the United States, Mr. Daugherty, is certainly premature in issuing a warning to the miners against violence. There is no disorder in sight among the coal miners nor is any violence threatened. The suspension will not take place for almost 10 days. If the attorney-general wants to put down violence, why does he not proceed against the coal operators who publicly admit violation of the agreement? They constitute the only group which thus far has committed violence.

"In refusing to comply with an agreement which they solemnly made and to the enforcement of which they

DEBATE FINISHED, SENATE WILL VOTE ON TREATY TODAY

Final Date of Oratory Brings Display of Fireworks Almost Up to Versailles Pact Standard.

GLASS ARRAIGNS PACT AS STEP TOWARD WAR

Senator Watson Opens Evening Session With Rap at William Jennings Bryan.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

Washington, March 23.—The senate tonight concluded its long debate on the four-power Pacific treaty and prepared for the final vote tomorrow, with the leaders on both sides privately agreeing that ratification by a narrow margin seemed certain.

A display of oratorical fireworks, scarcely surpassed in spectacular effect even during the Versailles treaty fight, brought the debate to an end. Both opponents and supporters of the pact summed up their four weeks of argument in a running crossfire of discussion that lasted all day and until late at night, but apparently did not change a vote.

Estimates of the outcome made tonight by senators well informed on the situation placed the ratification majority at from 3 to 10 votes, depending on how many of those who have been counted against the treaty join the majority once they see that the administration leaders are sure of the two-thirds necessary to ratify.

It was said that several who would stand with the opposition if there were a chance to defeat the fact were inclined not to waste their votes in a lost cause.

Many Changes Up.

A dozen or more reservations and amendments also must be voted on tomorrow, but the administration managers are confident of the defeat of all of them except the "no alliance" declaration framed by the foreign relations committee and accepted by President Harding. A final effort to se-

MRS. HOWELL DIES THURSDAY NIGHT

End Came Peacefully at Home—Funeral at 4:30 This Afternoon, at All Saints' Church.

Mrs. Clark Howell, wife of the editor and publisher of The Constitution and widely beloved woman, who had been ill for several days with double pneumonia, died at 8:30 o'clock Thursday night at her home, "Pine Hill."

The end came peacefully, members of the immediate family being in attendance at the bedside.

Funeral services will be held at All Saints' Episcopal church this afternoon at 4:30 o'clock. The interment, which will be in West View cemetery, will be private.

Mrs. Howell was the daughter of Mrs. Comer, and the late Hugh M. Comer, of Savannah, who was one of Georgia's most constructive citizens, and president of the Central of Georgia railroad.

Her children are Clark, Jr., assistant general-manager of The Constitution; Comer, who is now traveling in Europe on a vacation from Oxford university, England, where he is a student; Albert and Julian.

She was a sister of Hugh M. Comer, of Savannah; Mrs. Mills B. Lane, of Savannah; Mrs. John K. Train, of Savannah, and John Comer, of Macon. E. T. Comer, of Millhaven, Ga.; ex-Governor B. B. Comer, of Alabama; Legare Comer, of Eufaula, Ala., and Fletcher Comer, of Midway, Ala., were her uncles.

The following will serve as pallbearers, meeting at the residence at 3:45 o'clock: Robert C. Alston, S. T. Weyman, Preston S. Arkwright, W. D. Ellis, Jr., Dr. H. C. White, E. R. Black, R. F. Maddox, Linton C. Hopkins, Hunt Chipley, Robert Smythe, Hollins N. Randolph and Hugh M. Dorsey.

HOUSE IS LIKENED TO 3-RING CIRCUS AS DEBATE RAGES

Under Gag Rule, Amendments Were Blocked, But Every Member Wanted to Talk.

VOTE WAS 333 TO 70, IN FAVOR OF MEASURE

Harding Is Expected to Make Fight for Delay in Senate— Veto Probable.

BY JOHN M. GLEISSNER, United News Staff Correspondent.

Washington, March 23.—The house, late Thursday, passed the $4,000,000,000 soldier bonus bill.

Since no amendments were permitted under the rule, the measure as passed was in the same form as reported from the house ways and means committee. It provides cash payments to men entitled to receive $50 or less; an endowment insurance certificate on which service men may borrow up to 50 per cent of its face value for others, and service men are given the option of these two provisions, or home aid, farm aid, land settlement or vocational training.

The bill now goes to the senate, where President Harding will make a fight to have it delayed.

Vote 333 to 70.

Under the rule a two-thirds majority was required to pass the measure.

The vote was 333 to 70, vastly more than sufficient to put the measure through the lower branch. Four voted present.

The president's fight for delaying or entirely rewriting the bill in the senate, so that it may definitely provide funds for the soldiers' compensation, was started even before the measure had passed the house. The treasury department let it be known that collections on the March 15 installment of the income and profits taxes indicated that they would fall about $60,000,000 below the estimates for the quarter.

Taxes Fall Off.

On the basis of collections thus far, the March 15 installment, it was said, will be only about $400,000,000 as compared with $460,000,000 expected. If this proves true after all collections are compiled at the end of the month, the treasury will face a shortage of over $200,000,000 in the estimated revenue from this source during the calendar year of 1922, entirely upsetting the treasury's program for continuing reduction of the public debt and making necessary further borrowing by the government to meet appropriations made upon the basis of budget estimates.

The falling off in tax revenues is attributable, treasury officials said, to the industrial depression, and the extent of this may be indicated from the fact that the $400,000,000 expected from the first quarter's collections this year are as against $728,000,000 collected from the same sources for the corresponding quarter last year.

To add a bonus drain to this, treasury officials indicated, would render even more difficult the government's financial operations.

Like 3-Ring Circus.

The house was like a multi-ringed circus during the six hours preceding the vote on the bonus bill late Thursday.

The outcome, of course, was never in doubt after the gag rule, shutting off all amendments, went through about 2 o'clock 221 to 121. There pledged their honor and business integrity they have menaced the public peace and public welfare. A group of men which does violence to an agreement is no less guilty than those who commit violence during public stress and turmoil.

DAUGHERTY WARNS AGAINST VIOLENCE

"The attorney-general certainly would have a right to act in order to prevent the coal operators from committing violence because the government is in reality a party to the existing agreement. Through the order of the president of the United States the existing agreement was consummated. Surely the attorney-general and those in charge of the government can exercise some legal or moral force which would require the coal operators to carry out an agreement to which the government is a party.

Sees Threat.

"Two years ago the government compelled the miners to do what it wanted done. The miners were subjected to court proceedings, their leaders were arrested and the executive, judicial and military branchs of the government were utilized in order to compel the miners to return to work. The government, through the attorney-general, has threatened to take drastic action again if necessary, in order to produce coal which is so indispensable in operating the transportation systems of the nation.

"The department of labor has failed in its efforts to persuade the coal operators to comply with an agreement and now comes the attorney-general warning the miners against violence. The only impression which can be obtained from an analysis of the attitude of the government is if necessary, the miners will be coerced and forces of the government will be used against them in order to guarantee a production of coal, but the coal operators may commit violence by refusing to carry out their contract and at the same time get the protection of the government."

CHARGES EFFORT TO CRUSH UNIONS.

New York, March 23.—Charges that "b g business and so-called Americanism organizations" of the country are engaged in a deliberate attempt to crush organized labor were made here today by John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America.

Mr. Lewis' statement came at the close of a three-day session of the mine owners' and workers' wage arbitration committee, which ended without any agreement which would halt the impending strike of 600,000 anthracite and bituminous miners April 1.

Agreement of miners and operators upon a wage scale for the 3,000 anthracite men who will maintain colliery properties while the strike is in progress was the sole result of today's session. This agreement was in the form of a contract stipulating that these men shall receive the present scale while the strike is on, their wages for the strike period to be governed retroactively by the scale upon which settlement of the strike shall be based.

he following communique was issued by the committee of eight: "The anthracite subcommittee met today. The following memorandum offered by the mine workers' representatives was adopted:

"'It is understood that pending the negotiation of a new agreement, the organization shall allow such men as may be required for the proper maintenance and protection of property to work at the wage schedules provided for the various occupations under the provisions of the present agreement. The new agreement, when consummated, shall be effective as of April 1, 1922.'"

The committee of eight adjourned tonight to permit Mr. Lewis and the dozen anthracite chiefs chosen as district representatives to attend a conference of the general policies committee of strike ways and means, scheduled to begin at Cleveland tomorrow.

BERRIEN DENIES COMMITTING CRIME

fore, as I had a right to do, drew on the funds held by an Atlanta bank which had collected this draft. The bank that had collected the draft had received a telegram from its New York correspondent with two noughts omitted making $4,200 instead of $420,000, the correct amount of the draft.

"This error of the agent of the Atlanta bank caused some of my checks to be turned down and naturally aroused some fear among the holders of my checks. It caused me untold damages and affected my credit. I was doing a splendid business as a private banker, making a good living buying and selling securities from others, just as I was doing for the state of Georgia, and conducting my business honestly, openly, and fairly to all persons.

"This mistake of the Atlanta bank and the later opposition of that bank resulted in a run on me and the same thing occurred with me as would occur with any other banker against whom a run was started.

Cause of Trouble.

"About November 15, 1921, as a direct result of the error I have told you about, and the bank's untrue statements, I was unable to meet all my personal obligations and I still owe the state of Georgia some money, part purchase money on the warrants that I had bought. I have not disputed the debt, and when I get out and can work I shall pay it. I wrote the governor that I would pay what I owed the state.

"I left Atlanta about November 20 in order to raise the money to pay my debts and in order to get the best prices possible for my securities. My securities were forced to sale with large losses to myself but I met the calls on my banking business as they came in and paid my debts so long as my funds lasted.

"I am guilty of no crime; I merely owe some money which I had been unable to pay, and in this respect I am like most everybody else in the present financial stringency. When I left I knew of no criminal charge against me; and as I was guilty of no crime, I did not expect any charge to be made."

Previous to his testimony, M. L. Brittain, superintendent of education, had testified that Berrien had admitted irregularities in his accounts.

Georgians Denounce G.O.P. Methods In Soldier Bonus

Constitution Bureau,
Raleigh Hotel.

Washington, March 23.—(By Constitution Leased Wire.)—Attacking the republicans' method in offering a half-shod bonus bill to the ex-service men of the country, Representative Carl Vinson, of Georgia, delivered a stirring speech in the house today. His address in part is as follows:

Vinson's Speech.

"Under this bill the ex-service men who accept the adjusted service certificate as provided for under title five, which is a scrip upon the treasury of the United States, is forced to hawk the same throughout the nation to get 50 per cent of its face value, and is required to borrow that from the bankers, paying 2 per cent over and above the discount rates of the federal reserve bank, which means 7 per cent on every dollar that he borrows on his scrip.

"In plain language, this administration claims that $471,000,000 in the pockets of the boys who fought the nation's battles will bankrupt the country.

"Payment should be made in cash direct from the treasury and in that manner the billion of dollars withdrawn from circulation by the unwarranted policies of the federal reserve board would again be put into circulation and would contribute enormously to bringing about a better condition in the country.

"To protect the corporations and the profiteers from excess profit tax, and the ultra-rich from an increased surtax, you have so drafted title five to pay to the bankers of the country over $100,000,000 in interest for loaning to them 50 per cent of the value of their treasury scrip.

"Mr. Speaker, I am heartily in favor of a soldiers' bonus bill, giving to the ex-service men the option of accepting a cash bonus, and on the fourth day of May, 1921, I introduced such a bill, providing for the payment of a bonus direct from the coffers of the nation which would have rehabilitated business by putting into circulation many hundreds of millions of dollars, and shown our gratitude to them for their service but recognizing fully that this is the best bill that you republicans will bring before the house for consideration, to which you allow no amendments, compelling members to either support it in its entirety or reject it, and believing that half a loaf is better than none, I shall give this measure my support."

"AFFRONT," SAYS CRISP.

Explaining that his vote in favor of the bonus bill was prompted by a desire to pay a just debt to the ex-service men, but characterizing its contents as an affront upon the intelligence of those same veterans, Congressman Charles R. Crisp, of Georgia, in an address before the house today, launched a vitriolic attack upon republicans for their methods used in forcing consideration of the measure.

Representative Crisp stated that democratic members were forced to accept the bonus bill as proposed or none at all.

"Gag rule," "partisan intollerance" and "financial idolatry" were some of the phrases used by the Georgia congressman in describing the manner in which house majority leaders thrust the bill before the body.

Worst Means Possible.

He declared that republicans sponsoring the legislation had deliberately chosen the most ill-advised means of rewarding the nation's defenders of any yet offered by congress with the possible exception of the sales tax plan.

What he declared to be typical of the "farcical aspect" of the measure is that "the bill levies no taxes and provides no method of raising the revenue to meet its provisions, but this is left to future legislation."

Discussing the unemployment situation of the country with particular respect to the ex-service men, there being some 700,000 of them, he said, Representative Crisp said congress might have spent its present energies far better by giving this condition their attention. In this connection he took occasion to refer to the Muscle Shoals proposition, setting himself out as positively in favor of granting the Ford lease.

Lauds Ford Offer.

Speaking on the Muscle Shoals subject, he said:

"While the bestowal of a bonus would prove a temporary and partial good to the soldiers, would not the bestowal of a permanent job prove a much more practical and lasting one? In Mr Ford's offer to lease Muscle Shoals, we are offered a partial solution at least of this deplorable unemployment problem.

"The republican party, which boasts of its efficiency and constructive ability, has been in charge of all branches of the government for over a year, and of both legislative branches for three years. They have talked much, they have proclaimed much, on the floors of both houses of congress and through the press, of the great reductions which they have brought about in government expenditures, though I apprehended the average taxpayer has seen no benefit from these paper economies, and they are merely paper ones, for there have been no real reductions in expenditures up to date.

"They have boasted that their efforts have restored prosperity throughout the United States, notwithstanding there are, in the large cities today, more idle men and longer bread lines than have been seen there in many years. In my judgment, it is time for them to cease proclaiming and to perform.

Will Provide Work.

"If the Ford contract is entered into, work will be at once resumed on the big dam, which is to provide this superb water power, and employment will thus be given to thousands of needy men who now walk the streets seeking it. When the dam is completed, large industries will be established, giving employment to many thousands more, and the farmers of the United States will be given nitrate, an essential element of fertilizer, at one-half the cost they are now paying the fertilizer companies for it.

"I appeal to my republican colleagues, who control the house, to bring in at once a resolution accepting the Ford proposition, so that the contract may be entered into and work inaugurated on this great enterprise, which will mean so much for the material prosperity of the country we all love."

Judge Crisp advocated payment of the bonus by issuance of short-term treasury certificates on interest due the government from foreign debts. He set himself out as unalterably opposed to the cancellation of these debts. Mention was made of the federal reserve board, stating that institution had already imposed enough financial depression on the country without extending the possibilities of such by passing a half-finished bill.

In discussing the method of raising funds to take care of the additional expenditure, he listed those subjects which he would oppose for taxation purposes.

UPSHAW CHARGES PLOT AGAINST BILL.

Congressman W. D. Upshaw, of Georgia, in a severe assault against administration tactics and republican "inefficiency," delivered a stirring speech during consideration of the bill. He charged house leaders with a pronounced purpose to defeat bonus legislation by offering a measure which from its very nature, he declared, demanded such drastic amendments by the senate that the result would be the discarding of the measure. His address in part is as follows:

"Regardless of the good or all of bonus legislation, regardless of any individual opinion for or against the soldier bonus, any man who cares for the truth of history must admit that the administration leadership has literally fallen to pieces in its effort to handle the situation. Everybody knows if the bonus for the soldier of the world war was a good thing it ought to have been passed by the last congress and on the first possible day of that session when the returning soldier most needed his government's helping hand.

If the soldier bonus bill was fit to be passed on the twenty-ninth day of May, it was worthy of passage on the twentieth day of January or February or March or April, when there would have been time to push it through the senate; but it was passed by this house on the twentieth day of May, remember—only three days before adjournment, when it was legislatively impossible to get it through the senate.

At Sixes and Sevens.

"The president is calling for one kind of bill, the treasury calling for another, the unterrified insurgents calling yet for another, and the soldiers and sailors, their aids and abettors are divided in camps of scism, and quest, behest and protest. The administration bloc is groping in a pitiful maze of timorous indecision and floundering in a seething maelstrom of incompetent incoherency. And, gentlemen, I submit that that is a terrible malady, nearly always proving fatal. The pathetic eventualities are expected to eventuate during the early ides of November.

"No fair man can escape the indictment that must be laid at the door of administration leadership when we declare that that leadership has forfeited the gratitude of the soldier for whatever of tardy good this legislation may carry to them. The soldier knows that if the republican majority had really wanted him to have this bonus, this bill or something better would have been passed by both branches of the 66th congress. He knows that if this bill, failing by republican indifference in the last congress, is worthy to pass on the last lap before another election, it was worthy to pass as the first legislation of the present congress.

President's Action.

"This soldier knows that the president did the very unusual thing to come before the senate early this session and urge the postponement of soldier bonus legislation; that same soldier knows that the president later took this same bonus proposition and proposed to tie it on to a rejected taxation scheme (the sales tax) which could not stand alone on the floor of this house or even in the ways and means committee.

"While this imperfect bill that has been brought out at last by the tardy administration forces is far from what it ought to be, I am supporting it as the only thing in sight—the only way in which America can take its place beside the allied nations in expressing our practical gratitude to the human redeemers of our threatened civilization."

BEDLAM OF ORATORY AS BONUS PASSES

was nothing then but to use up the four hours allotted for debate, and there was a veritable stampede by the congressmen to get a few brief words in for the benefit of their respective constituencies.

During this rapid-fire oratory—each member being on his feet only a minute or so—personalities were exchanged, galleries were torn between hisses and cheers, according as the speaker was against or for the bonus, and most of the time it sounded as if everyone was talking at once.

Many Spokesmen.

Different congressmen professed to know exactly what the president would do if the bill got up to him. In fact, to judge by the speeches, the president had a score or more of spokesmen on the floor about equally divided between those for and against the bonus. Representative Longworth was sure the president would sign the bill if the congress passed it, but wasn't sure the senate would pass it. Representative Pou thought congress would pass it, but was sure the president would veto it.

Representative Jeffers, of Alabama, took occasion to assail Secretary Mellon as a "profiteer." Representative Luce drew hisses from the gallery when he declared the bonus would be an "unnecessary burden."

So it went throughout the afternoon. It was a foregone conclusion what the house would do, so the representatives got as much fun out of the holiday as it could. Crowded galleries looked down upon the melee all afternoon. Many women and ex-soldiers were in the gallery crowds, joining in the demonstrations.

Assails "Gag Rule."

Representative Garrett, of Tennessee, the acting minority leader, assailed the "gag rule."

"We have here a bill imposing a heavier burden of taxation than any nation ever imposed in time of peace," he said, "and yet we propose to pass it without the dotting of an 'i' or the crossing of a 't.'"

Garrett asked the republican leader, Representative Mondell, if it would embarrass the party if any amendment were proposed to make the bill raise its own revenue, as the president desired.

Mondell retorted that the president had made no suggestion with regard to the pending bill, and had objected only to immediate large drains on the treasury. If amendments were proposed, he said, it would be solely for partisan political purposes.

Recalls Pledge.

During debate, Mondell recalled the platform pledge of his party and said, "No party can live which does not keep its pledges. This bill is not perfect, but it is the best that could be prepared."

Uncle Joe Cannon, of Illinois, oldest member of the house, drew prolonged applause from floor and gallery when he spoke in opposition to the bill. He favored caring for wounded and disabled now, and providing for the others later on with a service pension. Such a pension system will be evolved, he predicted.

Chairman Campbell, of the rules committee, drew probably the greatest demonstration when he attacked the minority's adverse report on the bill as "demagogic claptrap." He demanded of the minority why they had not paid the bonus from the billions they collected from the taxpayers during the war.

"You permitted soldiers to freeze and die in barracks and in hospitals," Campbell charged.

Democrats Protest.

This brought an uproar from the democrats, and loud cries of "No! No!"

But Campbell repeated his charge, and added new ones. Soldiers went into battle unprepared, he insisted, and billions were wasted.

Representative Jeffers, a democrat from Alabama, later on replied to Campbell, and attacked Secretary Mellon, who was opposed to the bonus bill. He charged that "Mellon interests" robbed the government during the war, and called the secretary "Prince of profiteers and greatest of grafters on the government."

"And now he rides in a $10,000 limousine and opposes adjusted compensation for the poor devil of a doughboy who sweat blood and slept in the mud," said Jeffers.

Representative Burke Cockran, of New York, with elaborate oratory, denounced the bill.

"There is no obligation to the soldiers," he said, "their heroism is their award."

Georgians Vote For Bill But Rap Plan as 'Farcical'

Constitution Bureau,
Raleigh Hotel.

Washington, March 23.—(By Constitution Leased Wire.)—Members of the Georgia delegation in congress voted to the man for the republican bonus bill which passed the house today.

Although the measure received their united support they were as unanimous in criticising its scope. They claim that the "farcical aspect" of its provisions, as Judge Charles R. Crisp characterized it, by failing to provide the method to be used in obtaining funds necessary, is enough to insure defeat in the senate within itself.

The scene prevailing just prior to the vote took on somewhat of a local color when several of the Georgia representatives became engaged in heated colloquies with republican leaders of the house.

Georgia Accusations.

Such accusations as "criminal injustice" and "premeditated deceit," employed by Judge Brand and Carl Vinson, respectively, were expressive of the delegation's sentiments.

Congressman Upshaw scored a hit which brought laughter and applause from democratic members of the house when he threw a broadside attack into remarks being made by Chairman Campbell, republican, of Kansas, of the rules committee, for his reference to government expenditures during the war.

Representative Campbell, who is one of the majority leaders, made certain remarks about the manner in which ex-service men were treated in France by a democratic congress and the methods used in sending them there. To which Congressman Upshaw replied:

Well Enough to Win.

"They were treated well enough for them to win the war."

Georgia congressmen explained that their only reason in voting for the bonus bill was the fear of never having the opportunity of voting for another one. They believe beyond "peradventure of doubt," as Representative Upshaw said, that the measure will ultimately find itself among the archives of dead house legislation.

According to the opinion of the best informed members of the body, the bill is in a more hopeless position of becoming law than it was before the present administration came into power.

Expect Veto.

In explaining this situation, they declare the president will find it incumbent upon him to veto it in defense of his stated position, even though the bill passes the senate, which latter possibility is more remote than may be pleasing to ex-service men who would be satisfied with any kind of bonus, it is said.

In defending their rather peculiar position of voting for a measure which they found to be faulty from the core, Representative Vinson and Judge Brand indicated that they were sacrificing opposition to an inefficient measure for the purpose of serving the ex-service men of the country with the best offer the exigencies of the occasion would permit.

Judge Larsen and others were firm in the belief that even if the president's demands for a sales tax method of providing funds for the bill were invoked the proposal would meet an overwhelming defeat due to a solid democratic opposition.

Constitution's Radio Department

LAFAYETTE, GA., PLANS RADIO RECEIVING SET

Chamber of Commerce Secretary Writes of Growing Interest in Constitution Service.

Carnesville citizens were first in their intentions to install a community radio receiving station, to get The Constitution's wireless telephone service from WGM only because they made their intention known one day ahead of the chamber of commerce of Lafayette, Ga.

Indicative of the growing interest in radio and of a realization by communities of the value of The Constitution's crop condition, market quotation and news service was the letter from the Lafayette Chamber of Commerce. Emphasis is laid in letters from representative people in different communities also on the entertainment features provided in The Constitution's service.

The letter of D. W. Herndon, secretary of the Lafayette Chamber of Commerce, reads in part as follows:

"We are very much interested in your wireless telephone movement and in your broadcasting system.

"It is our intention as soon as possible to install a receiving station at this point for the reception of your broadcasting system, with amplifier for use of a large number."

With this community receiving set, which it is planned to install at Lafayette, the citizens of the town will be able to have the concerts and entertainment features and they can receive the corp reports and news service of The Constitution's programs each night.

STATE COLLEGE RADIO PLANS ARE PUSHED

Will Install Wireless Set and Require Students to Take Course.

Athens, Ga., March 23.—Plans for the government radio station at the State College of Agriculture were taken a step further this afternoon when President Andrew M. Soule, of the college, and L. L. Hendron, professor of physics at the University of Georgia, had a conference with reference to the matter.

Dr. Soule declares that he is confident that the station and the course will be installed at the college by the first of September, and that the course will be required of agricultural students during the coming year. He says that he sees radio receiving stations on the larger farms within Georgia during the next few years, as one of the requisites to perfect farming.

Dr. Soule says that receiving stations can be erected for a negligible sum, ranging from $50 to $100, and that with the course that is to be offered at the agricultural college, the students will be in a position to receive messages from all over the country.

That fruit crops in the future may be saved through the radio receiving stations is the belief of Dr. Soule, as expressed in an interview Thursday. He says that even though the newspapers of today are valuable media for disseminating weather reports and market news to the farmers, he is confident that the radio apparatus will be better and more speedy service.

CONTINUOUS "V" TRANSMISSION TEST

Amateurs and beginners who hear the letter "V" sent continuously will be interested to know that this is the official test signal. It is sent when a station is making transmission tests.

CLUBS ASKED TO JOIN RADIO RELAY LEAGUE

25 Miles from Movie—What the Radio Means

How would you like to be 25 miles from a movie?

Of course you wouldn't want to, but then that is just what a lot of people who live in the country are confronted with.

And there's one reason for the enthusiasm which is being shown in the radio service of The Constitution.

W. B. Cassels, of Ellenton, S. C., in a letter to The Constitution's Radio Department tells the whole story in a few words.

"I am informed that your paper is operating a radio sending station in Atlanta," he writes. "The radio means a great deal to country people who are actually 25 miles from a moving picture show. You can realize how we appreciate some kind of entertainment after a hard day's work."

Fort Didn't Get In Soon Enough; Will Hereafter

McPherson Station Asks 2d Time for WGM Story on Army and Congress.

It was just after WGM had broadcasted a news story just off a press wire about action on an army bill before congress. The telephone rang in the radio room.

"Say, this is Fort McPherson," said a voice from the other end. "What was that about the army and congress?"

The speaker at the other end of the wire was given the substance of the story, and then one of the men in the radio room began reading the text of the story over the telephone. He got about half-way through it.

"That's far enough," said the voice at the other end. "We picked you up there. We didn't get started on time out here and we all wanted to know about that story. Believe me, we won't be late again. As soon as we picked you up it was great."

Fort McPherson is just one of the many places which is getting news being broadcasted by The Constitution each night.

WIRELESS EQUIPMENT FOR MARKET BUILDING

Radio equipment which will be connected with every booth in the large building planned by the management of the new Capital City Market building, it was learned Thursday. Architects have been instructed to make provision for wiring necessary to carry the wireless equipment into the booths.

"The market people have not gone into the radio proposition," said G. C. Gibson, engineer, "without a keen realization of its practical commercial possibilities. It is their belief that a few months will see its development to the point where market quotations, crop reports, financial statements and stocks fluctuations will be transmitted by radio the very minute they are available.

"They believe that shortly this method of transmission of information will be as vitally important to a modern business concern as the commercial telephone or the cash register."

DISTANCE RECORD OF PACIFIC AMATEUR

A long distance record for low-power wireless transmission has been attributed to Dr. A. F. Bangs an amateur of San Diego, Cal., according to a letter from Clifford J. Dow, operator at Wailuki, Maui, 2,300 nautical miles from San Diego.

Messages from Dr. Bangs' station were easily received at the island station, the signals being clearly audible. Dow's letter refers to picking up the messages on December 19 and 20, 1920.

Dr. Bangs is entitled to a record, not because of the distance spanned, as others have sent further, but because of the limited power which he used so successfully. His transmission wave length is 200 meters. He uses a continuous wave transmitter, with three 5-watt vacuum tubes and an antenna only fifteen feet above the ground.

BIG RADIO STATION PLANNED BY RICH'S

Another large radio plant is being planned for Atlanta.

This time it is M. Rich & Bros. Co., which is contemplating erection of a station on the roof of its Whitehall street store. It is planned to have the station in operation in short time.

SEN. WATSON LAUDS CONSTITUTION RADIO

Declares Service Is One of Biggest Forward Steps Taken in Quarter Century.

Constitution Bureau, Raleigh Hotel.

Washington, March 23.—(By Constitution Leased Wire.)—In a statement given out today, Senator Thomas E. Watson, of Georgia, declared the plan of The Constitution in offering radio market quotations to farmers of the southeast and persons living in isolated communities was one of the most constructive steps taken by any public institution within the last quarter of a century.

Broadcasting of this valuable information during harvesting seasons, he said, will save the state of Georgia and surrounding territory untold thousands of dollars each year.

Senator Watson expressed the hope that every person residing in the rural districts of the state avail themselves of the opportunity of receiving these reports by installing instruments in the home or by arranging a community receiving station which would serve a number of persons.

The amusement feature of the radio service will make rural home life more attractive, he stated, adding that aside from the commercial value to be derived this one attraction is enough to recommend the service to all progeressive people.

Questions Answered

Can I use an Arkay loud speaker with the Ray-di-co Baby Wonder receiving set so the rest of the family can hear? H. W. W.

Unless you are located within a very few miles of the station you wish to hear you cannot use a loud speaker with any crystal set.

I have room for a 90-foot aerial 35 feet high. Would I gain anything by having two wires in the aerial? H. K.

A one-wire aerial will work as good as two for a receiving set.

Will I get good results with radio music using a vario coupler, variable condenser and crystal detector? Can I add a variable condenser and get regenerative effects? R. I. C.

You will get fairly good results if your aerial is long enough. The variable condenser will not give generation. A tube set is essential for regeneration, and you will have to use two variometers and a vario coupler or similar apparatus.

Please inform me about suitable reading matter on radiophone. M. M.

Write to The Wireless Press, 326 Broadway, New York city.

Is it necessary to have a government license to operate a receiving set? C. A. W.

No; a license is required for transmitting only.

I am making a wireless outfit with the aid of a manual training teacher, and do not know how to put up my aerial. I bought some stranded wire which is silver in color and want to know if it will do. Will I need more wire for the aerial? I have a crystal detector stand, and want to know what mineral to put in it and whether it should be mounted or unmounted. J. M. D., JR.

The wire you have bought is probably stranded copper, tinned. It will do very well. As you do not state how much wire you have, it will be hard to tell you whether you have enough or not. Put up one wire on the roof, about 100 feet long, and insert small porcelain cleats at each end to keep it from touching anything. The lead-in wire may be made of insulated wire in order that there shall be no losses. A one-wire aerial is sufficient for receiving. Get a piece of mounted galena for your crystal detector.

Should the No. 40 wire used to rewind telephone receivers be enameled or silk covered? How should it be wound on? H. E. D.

Enameled wire of the size you mention is used in winding high resistance telephone receivers. Special winding machines are used for this purpose. You will probably have to do it by hand unless you rig up a little lathe from odds and ends. You will find it difficult to wind the receivers without breaking the wire, which is almost as fine as a human hair.

Will I have to scrape the insulation off my aerial wire? Will the same wire answer the purpose of a lead-in, and can the same wire be used in getting a set? In making a tuning coil can I use a 2-inch tube instead of a 3-inch tume? Can I use a wooden block in a tuning coil? Several friends say that I will have to use batteries with the set which you described. Is that right? How far will I be able to hear with the same set? A. K.

You will not have to scrape the insulation for your aerial wire. You can use the same wire in connecting the instruments with it if you wish. However, you will find that ordinary lamp cord is very good to use in connecting up a receiving instrument, since it is flexible. There is nothing to prevent you from using a 2-inch tube for a tuning coil. You can use a block for a tuning coil if the corners are rounded off. Don't use a block with sharp corners.

We are using insulated wire from our aerial to our receiving set. Can this wire be allowed to touch wood or plaster? Could we expect good results if our aerial is 45 feet high and 50 feet long? H. C. F.

You need not be especially careful about the installation of your lead-in wire after it comes indoors. The aerial you mention should give you good results if the connections are clean.

What is the largest number of feet of wire that can be used in a one-wire aerial? Does it make any difference whether the aerial points north, south, east or west? B. R.

A single wire aerial 125 feet long will serve nicely in receiving the broadcasting music. As far as the direction of the aerial is concerned you have all points of

POLICE OPEN FIRE ON MILL STRIKERS

Providence, R. I., March 23.—Police and deputy sheriffs today opened fire on a group of textile strikers in the Phillipsdale section of East Providence, wounding one man and putting a bullet hole through the coat of another.

Conflicting reports of the affair came from the authorities and the strikers. According to the former, the strikers numbered about 100 and were armed with stones, lying in ambush to attack workers bound for a Pawtucket mill. The strikers claim that there were only 40 of them and that they were going along the road peacefully on their way home from picketing an East Providence plant when they were attacked.

MYSTERY SHROUDS DEATH OF FARMER

Wetumpka, Ala., March 23.—Elmore county authorities today reported that they were making a searching investigation into the death of Dewey Bonner, whose body was found in Weoka creek, near Titus, last Sunday, after he had been missing since March 10. Post-mortem examination following exhuming of the body two days after burial, revealed that the man's neck had been broken before it was placed in the stream, according to the officers.

Charlie Collier, a negro, who found the body, has been detained by the authorities.

Bonner, a farmer, 30 years old, dropped from sight under mysterious circumstances, according to his wife, who is a school teacher at Titus. Shoes worn by Bonner at the time of his disappearance were said by officers to have been found in a house in the neighborhood. The wife discounts the theory of suicide first advanced.

'Beer and Wines' Paramount Issue InOhioCampaign

Columbus, Ohio, March 23.—"Beer and light wines" were injected into the coming political campaign in Ohio Thursday as a paramount issue.

With the announcement of C. Homer Durand, Coshocton attorney, that he would seek the republican gubernatorial nomination on a platform advocating modification of the Volstead act, politicians believed James A. Whites, state superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League, would be drawn into the fight.

Durand's platform will advocate the amendment of the Volstead act, so that the people can have beer and light wines. He will also advocate changes in state prohibition laws to make them conform to present public opinion.

"We realize that if Ohio, by nominating Durand for governor, goes on record in favor of beer and light wines, many other states will follow suit," his supporters said.

CREDIT RISKS ARE DISCUSSED BY SHOE MEN

Macon, Ga., March 23.—(Special.) Methods of decreasing credit risks were discussed today at the first session of the Southeastern Leather and Shoe Finders' Credit bureau, and a committee was appointed to draw up plans with that aim in view to be presented to the meeting tomorrow morning.

Members of this committee are J. H. Wilensky, of Atlanta; Joseph Kline, of Greensboro, N. C., and Arthur Bernd, of Macon.

At tomorrow's session there will be an election of officers and selection of the next meeting place. A movement is on foot to have Macon selected as the headquarters for a credit bureau that is proposed for the association, but no definite action will be taken until after the committee submits its report.

One of the most interesting talks today was made by George A. Knapp, of St. Louis, on "Turnovers." He advised the leather men to "buy often and sell quickly." De declared there are too many dealers who are loading up their shelves, putting the burden on the banks of thawing out "frozen assets." He declared that while business "is a little slack now, it will revive with the beginning of fall."

The convention will close tomorrow night with a dinner at the Hotel Dempsey.

WARE STRESSES NEED OF THE NEW NAHUNTA HIGHWAY

Waycross, Ga., March 23.—The greatest need of this section of the state at the present time is a highway extending from Waycross, through Nahunta, to the coast. The possibility of building such a road has come up for discussion at practically every good road conference held in this section during the past several months and the citizens of both Ware and Glynn county appear solidly behind the project.

The matter was discussed at the regular meeting of the members of council of the chamber of commerce at their luncheon today, and, according to K. M. Wiener, one of Ware county's representatives at Nahunta, good roads meeting, Ware and Glynn stand ready to appropriate $70,000 each for the construction of the highway, provided Brantley county will raise $30,000 by voting bonds.

VENICE REPORTED BADLY INUNDATED BY TIDAL WAVE

London, March 23.—A Central News dispatch from Venice says that a tidal wave late last night inundated the city, the water rising to a depth of more than 3 feet in some of the public squares.

Venice, situated virtually at sea level and threaded by canals, is subject to periodic inundations, due to unusually high tides and spring freshets. The squares, such as St. Marks, are under water at such times, but the rise seldom exceeds a few inches.

Let Us Believe Mary Is Really Sincere In Reason for Tears

Portland, Ore., March 23.—Mary Garden, here at the head of the Chicago Grand Opera company, says Portland is the first city to which she ever has been welcomed with kisses from both the governor and the mayor.

Upon arrival of Miss Garden's special train yesterday, a reception committee and thousands of other persons awaited her at the station. When Miss Garden appeared, Mayor George L. Baker rushed forward and kissed her. Governor Ben Olcott, who was next in line, looked a little doubtful as to just what course to pursue. "Go on, governor, you are next," yelled the crowd, and the governor did his duty as he saw it. Miss Garden straightaway burst into tears, but soon explained that they were tears of joy at so fine a reception.

Enrollment of Pupils for the First of April Begins at the Southern Business College

Big Manufacturing Concern Says That the Southern's Training Is "Different" From That of Many Other Schools.

Another enrollment period is on at the Southern Shorthand and Business university.

Young men and young women, in the city and out of the city, are now sending in their applications for entrance on April 3.

This insures those beginning their business courses now ample time in which to prepare for positions by the coming fall, the time which is forecasted as the beginning of a "new era of business activity."

Get ready; that's the thing to do right now.

"I have been looking for a position for several weeks, but the business men would tell me they could not use me unless I had a knowledge of shorthand or bookkeeping, so I am here to begin a course in business training," remarked a young man from College Park, when he enrolled at the Southern this week.

The Southern's training is the proper training; it's the kind that pleases the business men. Jusst read what one of the largest manufacturers in the United States has written to the Southern. This letter was unsolicited and will be shown to any one who may question its genuineness:

"Atlanta, Ga., March 16, 1922.

"Southern Shorthand and Business University,

"Atlanta, Ga.

"Gentlemen:

"It has just occurred to me that you might be interested in the experience I have had as a business man with graduates from your school, as compared with students who have worked for me in the past three or four years.

"Immediately after the war I employed a young lady of the S. S. & B. U. I was impressed with the thoroughness of her training which, coupled with her natural ability, rendered her invaluable until it was necessary for her to give up her business career for domestic reasons.

"In the interim I have in mind some dozen or more girls and men, graduates of different business schools.

"I now have in my employ a young lady from your school who has proven eminently satisfactory in the work for which I employed her.

"All of it leads me to state that there is something 'different,' evidently, in the training given the S. S. & B. U. students. I am not only impressed by the good, sound and thorough training which they evidently receive along the general lines, but I am more impressed by the fact that you call to their attention the apparent, but nevertheless important, details. For instance, in the matter of folding letters. I once employed a girl fresh from a business college who had to be instructed how to fold an ordinary letter. On the other hand, the S. S. & B. U. graduate is taught how to fold a letter scientifically.

"My present employee gave me the rather startling information that she had been advised by your instructors not to use chewing gum during office hours. I could mention other instances of similar import, but the above I believe is sufficient to illustrate my idea. In other words, it seems to me, that your idea is to give your students such training that will cause them to avoid little things which so irritate a business man who employs a recent graduate. These things are appreciated and give business men a good impression of the real worth of your school.

"With every good wish for the continued successful training of your charges, I am,

"Cordially yours,

THORN WILL LECTURE IN ATLANTA SUNDAY

"Millions Now Living Will Never Die," is the subject of a lecture to be delivered by W. J. Thorn, of New York city, at 3 o'clock Sunday afternoon in Cable hall, 82 North Broad street, under the auspices of the International Bible Students' association.

This lecture, which has been given in nearly every city of the United States and all principal countries of Europe, Asia, South America and Africa, has created widespread interest. The entire civilized world has heard speakers representing the International Bible Students' association deliver the facts contained in this lecture. No admission will be charged.

Mr. Thorn will deliver the same subject in the new Decatur High school auditorium, Decatur, Ga., at 7:30 o'clock Monday night. In summing up his great subject, Mr. Thorn said:

"The most momentous event of earth's history is the near establishment of God's kingdom among men; but, strange to say, this dominating theme of the Bible has been almost entirely overlooked by those who profess the Christian religion. Every one of the inspirted writers testified concerning a time of everlasting happiness for the human race—'times of restoration' of lost blessings and possessions. Jesus and His apostles preached that this gospel of blessing is for the vast majority; not a message of woe for all except a few.

"The kingdom of God which they heralded is the same as foretold by the prophets in such thrilling and positive language. Not a mysterious, intangible arrangement having no meaning for the toiler and the sufferer, but one which will bring such practical and understandable things as complete health, beautiful homes, luxuriant vegetation, sublime climate, righteous laws and greatest of all—unending life upon the earth.

"The Scriptures are clear in their proclamation that many people will be so favored as to live through the present transition period when mankind passes from the thraldom of Satan's misrule to the glorious liberty of the kingdom of God, and these will actually never die. It is your duty and privilege to inform yourself concerning the cause of the present universal unrest and the wonderful blessings to follow."

Committee Planned By Chamber to Act On State Relations

Robert C. Alston, vice president of civic affairs of the chamber of commerce, announced Thursday that a committee on state relations which will serve as a liason body between Atlanta and Georgia business men, is in process of organization.

This committee, Mr. Alston believes, will aid greatly in stimulating a cooperative spirit between business men throughout the state for the common public good and will work in conformity with the measures now being undertaken by the chamber.

PARCEL POST BLAMED FOR P. O. DEFICITS

Washington, March 23.—Responsibility for deficits incurred by the postoffice department in the handling of mails is attributed largely to the parcel post system, according to data collected by the joint postal commission which has been conducting a nation-wide investigation into the cost of handling of all classes of mail matter. Conclusions of the commission are to be incorporated in a report to be submitted to congress next fall, after further investigations have been completed, it was announced today.

Members of the commission and officials of the postoffice department declared the parcel post to be indispensable to the country, but asserted that some system should be devised to establish it on a paying basis. The commission has not yet determined finally, it was said, to what extent the postal deficit is attributable to the parcel post, but the fact that its operation had made inroads ino postal appropriations had caused concern for some time, officials said.

Rush B. Simmons, chief postoffice inspector, representing the postoffice department on the commission, said the fact that the parcel post system had been found not to be paying expenses was no surprise, as it had been generally conceded for some time that something should be done to put that branch of the service on a sound basis. What recommendations the commission will make to congress in its report could not be forecast at this time, members said.

Foote, president of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce, as chairman of the membership committee of the chamber, which contemplates a drive to add more than 1,000 new members. With this goal in view the chamber will have a total membership of around 6,000 members when the campaign is finished, it was stated.

B. S. Barker, secretary of the chamber, is arranging the details of the approaching campaign. He held a consultation Thursday afternoon with Mr. Ayer, in which a number of plans were formulated toward organizing the committee and other phases also were discussed.

The drive will begin next week.

JOBS ARE ASKED, FOR UNEMPLOYED LEGION MEMBERS

Four hundred letters to wholesale dealers and manufacturers were mailed out Thursday by the chamber of commerce for jobs for the army of unemployed here. This action was taken by the chamber in collaboration with the local posts of the American Legion in their efforts to find work for every idle former service man.

APRIL 18 SET AS DATE FOR SPECIAL ELECTION

The date for the special election to be held in Fulton county to name a sucsessor to the late T. M. Armistead as tax receiver and to fill other positions caused by resignations, has been set, definitely, for Tuesday, April 18, according to an announcement made Thursday by Ordinary Thomas H. Jeffries. This date was fixed following a conference held Thursday by Ordinary Jeffries and County Attorney E. E. Pomeroy. The registration books will close March 25.

After fixing April 18 as the date for the election a legal technicality was raised and it was thought that the date might be moved up to April 25. The county attorney then conferred with the ordinary and the original date was decided on definitely, it being found that no legal obstacle prevented the holding of the election on that date.

Six candidates have announced for the position of tax receiver, these being J. L. McCord, Dr. W. L. Gilbert, W. H. Abbott, John Armistead, Walter Taylor and W. H. Arnold. Several other prominent men may enter the fight.

Several candidates will enter the race to succeed Dr. Gilbert, who resigned as member of the county board of commissioners to enter the race for tax receiver.

The successful candidate for tax receiver will hold office until January 1, 1924. The successor of Dr. Gilbert will have to run again in November in the regular election, as Dr. Gilberts' time expires after that election.

New Sunday School Building Is Planned By Decatur Church

A committee of nine was appointed this week at a mass meeting, presided over by Attorney-General George M. Napier, of the members of Decatur Methodist church to formulate plans for the erection of a Sunday school building.

The following committee was appointed: Bayne Gibson, Charles A. Mathews, J. O. Norris, A. J. Woodruff, L. M. Spruell Walker White, Mrs. J. A. McCrary, Mrs. H. W. Cantrell and Miss Reba Jernigan

CABINET DISCORD.

In a recent dispatch our Washington correspondent calls attention to what he characterizes the "mire of discord and jealousy" that exists in the cabinet, which apparently has resulted in a complete dissolution of all plans for a reorganization of the various departments of the government.

Such reorganization, systematization and co-ordination within the central governmental plant were not only promised by the republicans preceding the election of President Harding, but strongly recommended in behalf of economy by General Dawes, director of the budget, and plans to that end were tentatively worked out.

The plans failed of adoption, however, for the reason, it appears, that certain cabinet officers and bureau heads are more jealous of their prerogatives than they are solicitous for economy in government.

A time-honored criticism the republicans have made against the democratic party is that it has proven itself incompetent to conduct the affairs of the government in a smooth-running, systematic, and economical fashion; and particularly in advance of the last presidential election the G. O. P. assured the American people that if it were returned to power the alleged loose-jointed, cumbersome, wasteful policies of previous administrations would be discarded and the government put upon a new and up-to-date, businesslike basis of operation.

In the early days of the Harding administration the budget director mapped out a brand new system whereby millions of dollars of waste in the form of lost motion and duplication of effort in running the government might be saved; but that was as far as he was able to go without the approval and co-operation of the various departments—which was not forthcoming.

And now, it seems, instead of the promised reforms having been made and put into operation for the benefit of the taxpayers of the country, the government is weakened by dissension and discord and petty jealousies within the cabinet, arising out of a well-directed effort to promote efficiency and to economize.

This is only another instance in which the republican party has proven itself vastly more "efficient" at making promises than in performance.

A SENSIBLE KING.

Boris, the Bulgarian king, is a very young man, and like certain former rulers who are now in exile, he is in the hard-up class.

But it is said that he is setting a good example by making the best of things. He shares, uncomplainingly, in whatever hardships his people have to endure.

Here is what is said of his attitude in this respect, in a letter to the Pittsburg Dispatch, under a Sofia date line—

"He lives almost as humbly and plainly as one of his peasants. The young ruler has repeatedly refused financial assistance from the government because he felt the country's need of economy and conservation was too great. He is doing everything he can to make both ends meeet. His chief motive of life is work. He is never idle. If he isn't busy with the affairs of state, he is studying. Horticulture, natural history and engineering are his hobbies. Within the palace grounds at Vrania he has had a narrow-gauge railroad built for his own experimental purposes. He is absorbed in the subject of engineering and is familiar with most of the big American railway systems."

This is where he sets the good example, not only to his people, but to such complaining exiled former monarchs as Charles, of Austria, and Mr. William Hohenzollern, who are always advertising their troubles in every possible way.

The young Bulgarian ruler realizes that, under present changed conditions, a king himself, instead of counting his treasures, may come to be glad of a clerkship in a counting house.

Therefore, instead of worrying himself and others with the recital of his misfortunes, he is fitting himself for the work of the world.

That's the proper spirit for kings and ex-kings, in this era of European world-reorganization.

THE NEW GRADY UNIT.

Announcement that plans for the erection of an important addition to the Grady hospital plant, presented by the executors of the late Albert Steiner estate, have been accepted by the hospitals and charities committee of council, is gratifying to every citizen of Atlanta who has the welfare of the community at heart.

The proposal is in compliance with the provisions of Mr. Steiner's will which bequeathed half a million dollars to the city of Atlanta to be used in the construction and maintenance of a modern clinic, as a unit of the Grady hospital plant, primarily for the treatment of cancer.

By the terms of the contract between the executors and the city, as much of the $500,000 bequest as necessary will be used in the erection of a clinic, to be known as the "Albert Steiner ward," which will specialize in the treatment of cancer, but it is expected that facilities will be provided in the building for the treatment of other than cancer cases.

When the terms of this bequest shall have been carried out Atlanta will be the seat of the greatest cancer clinic in the south, the unexcelled facilities of which will be available to all sufferers from that dreaded malady, rich and poor alike; and which will stand as an enduring monument to the memory and humanitarian spirit of the Atlantan whose generosity and compassion for suffering humanity provided the funds for its erection.

The beginning of actual construction of the building now awaits only the official ratification of the general plan by council, and it is to be hoped that such action will be deferred no longer than is absolutely necessary.

SAFETY AT CROSSINGS.

In an effort to minimize the grade-crossing hazard in Pensylvania the public service commission of that state, having tried education and appeals to reason and common sense without satisfactory results, has resorted to legal compulsion as a means of lessening the danger at points within its jurisdiction where rail lines and highways cross.

The commission has issued an order that all highway traffic shall come "to a full stop before crossing the tracks of any steam or electric railway company," except those of trolley lines inside the corporate limits of cities.

"Such stops," according to the order, "are to be made not more than 75 feet from the nearest rail of the crossing and at points where the clearest view of approaching trains or cars can be had," and "the driver is to carefully look in each direction for approaching cars or trains and is not to proceed until it is ascertained that the crossing can be accomplished in safety."

The commission holds that while it has no right to cause the arrest of violators of this order as transgressors of the statutory law, it does possess power to revoke the driver's licenses of those who disobey it; and that is what the commission proposes to do.

Propaganda and the numerous "safety first" campaigns that have been conducted to educate the public to the wisdom and necessity of prudence and carefulness undoubtedly have served to lessen the peril of the highway; but despite all that has been done in that direction, the day-by-day loss of life and limb in accidents at grade crossings is appalling—so appalling, in fact, as to amply justify this action by the Pennsylvania public service board.

The situation would be greatly improved, no doubt, if the highway and police authorities in every state were to invoke rules similar to those in force in Pennsylvania, making them uniform the country over.

The American public annually pays a fearful toll to thoughtlessness and empty-headed carelessness at grade crossings.

It is a wastage of human life and resources that ought to be and can be eliminated; and no method for its elimination is too drastic so long as it is productive of results.

HEALTH TALKS

BY WILLIAM BRADY, M. D.

DON'T AGGRAVATE GERMS.

A few who believe all they read still speak of "the germ theory" in a facetious way as though to imply that the causation of disease by germs were still debatable. One generally finds these perons dabbling with some kind of plausible treatment for something or other, the appeal of the treatment being based upon pseudo scientific flapdoodle which serves to conceal the absurdity of the thing. Thus many tons of pleasantly scented mud are sold to the public annually on the strength of a bit of near-scientific "osmosis," which from its mystery makes impression on the mind of the poorly educated physician and the prescribing nurse.

Be it a boil or a carbuncle or an infected wound or any threatened "gathering" the most grateful assistance one can render the germs consists of the application of a nice warm flaxseed meal poultice or any other meal poultice. If the aim is to encourage rapid multiplication of the germs responsible for the trouble, and aid their spread to nearby fresh fields where they can start new boils, carbuncles or festers, then the thing to do is apply a big warm moist poultice of flaxseed meal, bread crumbs, corn meal or whatever other feed you have in the house. The germs will rise up and call you blessed.

If the aim is to relieve pain or discomfort from boil, carbuncle, infected wound or threatened gathering, apply a large hot moist dressing which is at least aseptic (free from germs) or not a favorable culture medium for the growth and multiplication of germs or even has antiseptic (opposing the multiplication of germs) properties. This consists of many layers or folds of gauze or cheese cloth which has been sterilized by boiling, steam or heat, in a bulky mass upon the infected area, kept moist with water or some solution applied as hot as endurable. Such a dressing serves every good purpose that can be served by anything in the poultice line, yet does not lend any encouragement to the activities of the germs responsible for all the trouble.

One good solution with which to keep such a dressing moistened is solution of a heaping tablespoonful of common salt in each pint of boiled water. Perhaps still better as favoring drainage from the wound or boil or whatnot and at the same time aiding the natural germicidal activities of the blood itself, is a solution of a heaping tablespoonful of sodium citrate with a heaping tablespoonful of common salt in each pint of hot boiled water. When there is already, or likely soon will be a discharge from the wound, the solution may be given sufficient antiseptic property to disinfect the dressings by adding a heaping tablespoonful of boric acid along with one or both of the other harmless remedies named.

Some such dressing, always bulky and not a trial size affair, may well be applied at the first indication of any infection resembling boil, carbuncle or poisoned wound. This wet dressing constitutes a sanitary poultice, and is the best kind of surgical first aid for the conditions mentioned.

Prolonging Your Life

BY EDWARD L. HAWK.

How much pleasure do you get out of your work? If your work is simply work, there is something wrong.

The really great men of history, past and present, thoroughly enjoyed their work—that is why they are great. One of our prominent authors said: "Until you become a part of the thing you do just so long will you do but little," and he is absolutely right, for the man who can not put his heart—his personality—into his work can not hope to succeed at his task, profession or business.

Edison at his age is busy for eighteen hours every day, and he tells us that he does not work, but plays. How many of us can work for eighteen hours a day and call it "play?" Very, very few, for but 10 per cent of us are engaged in the proper vocations, and the other ninety per cent are misfits. These figures are based on statistics and are not mere guesswork.

The individual who finds his work irksome can not take pleasure in it, and he will become soured, morose, discouraged and worried. All of these emotions will tend to shorten human life in that they will create poisons within the human body that will eventually tear down the physical fiber.

The individual who finds pleasure in his work and who can put his heart into it and become a part of it will live long and enjoy life. Look back over history and you will find that the men who had their hearts in their work lived to good old age and were active to the last moment.

A great financial service firm in Chicago employing hundreds of salesmen throughout the country has adopted a salesmen's slogan, "Love your work," and daily this slogan is impressed upon the minds of these salesmen, for this firm knows that unless love of work is sincerely felt by every man it will suffer great losses.

If you do not love your work, get into another line that you do love, or find out what is wrong with you and change it. There is a reason why you do not love your work and you must find out what that reason is and how you can change things, if you hope to be happy and successful. Love life and love of work go hand in hand.

You have an undisputed right to long life, happiness and success, but just so long as you continue to do the thing that is not natural for you to do and do not get joy out of your work you are denying yourself that right. Think this over. What in your nature does not harmonize with what you are doing? Where is the friction? What would you rather do than the thing you are now doing? Get out of that rut and onto the road. Make play of your work. Get real pleasure out of life. Begin to really live and continue living to a ripe old age.

Note—Mr. Hawk will deliver the last of his free lectures at the Wesley Memorial church tonight.

BITS OF NEW YORK LIFE

BY O. O. M'INTYRE

New York, March 23.—Thoughts while strolling around New York: The pell-mell rush of home-goers. Black lava-flow of motors. Shop girls with a kitten-gaze. Thin borzoi days and gloomy grooms. Newsboys shrieking a world's despair. Spangled and plumed Broadway Dianas—just beginning the day. My hat is off to that bird—he talked back to a cop.

Street lamps winking one by one along side streets. Aged clerks going to solitary exile in shabby brownstone fronts. The pigeons descend upon Times Square for crumbs. There goes Nora Bayes. Her hair is silver white. Tempus does fugit.

A Chinese mandarin and an Egyptian dancing girl—but only make believe. They're leaving a costumer's shop. Crowds waiting to see Dempsey leave the theater. Wish I packed his wallop. I'd like to try it on the fellow who sold me these shoes. Little man with a paunch has married three beautiful women. No wonder he's short of breath.

A snow white limousine! Sychophants and adventurers. The row of beggars lined up against the public library wall. And the blind one is smoking a pipe. Wonder what book the tower policemen is reading. More new perfume shops. And the most beautiful ladies as clerks.

Mrs. Something-or-Other brings out her coach and four. Always feel sorry for the poor boob who has to blow the bugle. Looks so silly in his short pants. Wonder how much jack a coach bugler gets?

Geraldine Farrar coming from tea. Pink hat and monkey fur coat. What's become of what's-his-name? I'll not give him any publicity. His eyes are too soulful. Ambulance laden with flowers from theater dressing rooms. So to waffles!

At the Bishop's dinner the other evening Bishop Manning said he could probably tell Dr. Stetson, his successor in the rectorship of Old Trinity a few unfamiliar things about his parish. "For instance," he said, "the Trinity charter gives the church the right to all whales cast up on the shore of Long Island." Long Island fishermen might dispute the fact. Nevertheless whales were deemed royal fishes at the time when a British sovereign granted the Trinity charter.

The Stage Door Inn in West Forty-seventh street has opened. It is being conducted by a group of stage stars and show girls who are out of work are acting as waitresses. It is the first effort by stage people to conduct a co-operative business, the profits will go into a fund for those who are in dire need. And the plight of chorus girls in New York is indeed tragic. Three of the waitresses at the Stage Door Inn are girls who were making $150 a week a year ago. No tipping is permitted at the inn but those who wish to contribute may offer the usual tip for the fund. The place is having quite a vogue for the sponsors have asked prominent people of the stage to dine there whenever possible and others go to see them at close range. The night I was there I saw Hilda Spong, John Drew, Hazel Dawn, Leon Errol, Louise Groody and many others of equal prominence.

Dan the Battery Boatman, is a character known to every ship-news reporter. He drifted into ship-news headquarters 15 years ago, a derelict from a tramp steamer. He had once voyaged with Stevenson and he became ambitious to write. He acts as a sort of messenger boy and picks up small change and enough to eat. Each day he writes an article which he gives to some one of the scribes. He has never reached print with his stuff but he keeps at it. And he does not complain because editors do not accept his wares.

Five other men are under indictment charging murder in the same case. Chance declared he did not fire a single shot. The defense introduced Sidney Rowe, a relative and one of the five men under indictment, who testified that he killed Allen in self-defense.

White Tax Case Thrown in Federal Court in Augusta

Augusta, Ga., March 23.—(Special.)—The J. B. White tax case has gone to the federal courts. The action is an effort to collect about $210,000 taxes and interest, alleged to be due Richmond county and the state by the estate of the late J. B. White, the mill town dry goods merchant of Augusta, who died in Italy several years ago.

Recently the Georgia court of appeals held that an arbitration, which had been ordered in this case was illegal, the arbitrators having found that the taxes due by the White estate amounted to $130,000. The Georgia high court ruling left the case where the tax officers were under instructions to levy and to proceed to collect in the sum of about $210,000.

Today E. H. Callaway secured an order from United Stated Judge Beverly D Evans temporarily enjoining the Richmond county tax officers from proceeding to levy and collect.

Hearing on the permanent injunction is set for April 10, at Augusta. Judge Evans has requested Judge Alex King and Judge Samuel Sibley to sit with him on the hearing. Governor Hardwick and Attorney-General Napier have been notified. Wallace B. Pierce and Ben E. Pierce represent the county and state in the litigation.

The petition for injunction alleges that the tax assessments involved are contrary to law; that J. B. White was a non-resident of the United States during the years when the taxes are alleged to have been due and unpaid; that he left this country in 1900, two years before the period during which taxes were sought to be collected; that when he left America no taxes were due, and that since he left, the million dollars of securities involved have been in the possession of Henry Clews & Co., of New York.

The case has been in the courts for more than two years. Pierce Brothers for the state and county have won it in all Georgia courts.

Peanut Growers Oppose Removal Of U. S. Tariff

Albany, Ga., March 23.—(Special.) The peanut industry has assumed an importance in south Georgia which causes profound interest to center in the report that peanuts will be placed on the free list, according to plans of the senate finance committee.

Not only are 3,000 farmers in this part of the state who have counted on making peanuts an important money crop this year, but hundreds of thousands of dollars have been invested in shelling and cleaning plants, oil mills, etc. There are four of these in Albany alone, and others at various points in the lower section of the state.

The expectation of farmers has been that prices probably would be much better in the peanut market next fall and winter than during the past year. New crop peanuts are now bringing $70 a ton, or 3 1-2 cents a pound, which is $20 a ton better than was offered only a few months ago.

No Large Acreage.

Mill men generally have been of the opinion that indications were favorable for a steady upward tendency of prices, and that the 1922 crop would prove profitable to the growers, provided they did not make the mistake of planting too large an acreage. There has been no indication, however, of any disposition to do this.

Now comes the report from Washington that peanuts, which now carry a tariff of 4 cents a pound, will be restored to the free list, such being the purpose of the senate committee having the bill in charge. Senator Harris and Senator Watson are being deluged with letters, telegrams and petitions calling attention to the situation as Georgia peanut interests see it, and urging that a fight be made to retain the present tariff.

A Money Crop.

The manager of a south Georgia cotton oil mill that installed machinery to crush peanuts has written Senator Harris to remind him that "if the peanut industry is killed, there will be many idle farms in south Georgia, as peanuts have largely taken the place of cotton as a money crop."

The fear is expressed that very few peanuts will be planted if it shall appear that this product is to be placed on the free list, for Chinese peanuts can be delivered in the Mississippi valley for less than it costs farmers in this country to grow them.

ALL ATLANTA WOMEN URGED TO REGISTER

Placards attractively printed, which will urge all women to register to vote in the 1922 elections without delay, will be placed in windows of downtown stores today, according to announcement of leaders of the League of Women Voters Thursday.

Mrs. Karl W. Brittain, chairman of registration, states that next week an intensive drive for registration of women by wards will be conducted. Each ward will be canvassed by registration parties, and it is said that automobiles will be furnished all prospective registrants who cannot conveniently go to the courthouse without this means of transportation.

SPALDING TO HOLD FAIR IN OCTOBER

Griffin, Ga., March 23.—(Special.) Spalding county will hold a fair again this year. For the past several years the Spalding county fair has not been held, due to general conditions, but at a meeting of the association it was definitely decided to hold a fair this year, last week in October.

The association elected officers for this year as follows: Julian Gaissert, president; Paul J. Slaton, vice president, and H. B. Montgomery, secretary and treasurer. The retiring officers are J. Woods Hammond, president; Julian Gaissert, vice president, and John B. Mills secretary and treasurer.

Eighth District Rotarians Hold Great Conference

Savannah, Ga., March 23.—(Special.)—The sixth conference of the eighth district International Association of Rotary clubs—comprising Georgia, Florida and Alabama—began a successful two days' session here today, selecting St. Petersburg, Fla., as the place of the next meeting, there being no opposition. Election of district governor is set for tomorrow.

More than 700 Rotarians are in Savannah for the meeting, which is typical of the activities of the organization. John A. Turner, of Tampa, is district governor. Atlanta, Macon, Augusta, Athens, Columbus, Thomasville, Brunswick, Albany, Valdosta, St. Petersburg, respectively entertained "model Rotary luncheons" today, each at different hotels. Gainesville, Talladega, Selma, Opelika, Macon, Dothan, Birmingham, Andalusia, West Palm Beach Troy, Athens, Elberton and Miami will hold "model luncheons" tomorrow.

Jass bands, sextettes, saxophone groups, vocal organizations from a dozen towns are supplying that form of the entertainment. Fort Lauderdale, Fla., and Waynesboro, Ga., the later having received its charter only Tuesday of this week, both are claiming the "Baby club" title.

The initial session following breakfast this morning embraced two principal addresses, that of Governor Turner, and the talk by William Coppeck, Council Bluffs, vice president of the international organization. The governor reported average attendance for the clubs of the district at 85 per cent for the year; recommended the establishment of a "School of Rotary" and the establishment of a code of business ethics as a standard for Rotarians. Mr. Coppeck spoke of the spirit of international Rotary.

The afternoon sessions were "special assembles" held in conference rooms in various places; one for the presidents, one for the secretaries of clubs, one on education, one on entertainment, and one on boys' work. These assemblies, by classified groups, developed in detail the solution of questions affecting the conduct of the department of Rotary work. This evening was given over to fun and frolic at the municipal auditorium, following an informal reception to the district governor and his party.

Invents Device To Fight Boll Weevil on Cotton

Griffin, Ga., March 23.—(Special.) A Griffin man has invented and patented a device which he claims will effectively rid Georgia of the boll weevil, provided the farmers will use it. This device was invented by W. B. Griffin and is called "The Griffin Boll Weevil Mover."

The invention is in reality two devices, each of which fits over the plow stock as now in general use. The attachment first used by the farmer is a bar about four or five feet in length, holding two metal cans, each fitted with stop cocks. These cans are filled with ordinary kerosene oil and the cans covered with a cloth bag. The oil filters through the cloth as the farmer plows his cotton and covers the young cotton plant.

When the cotton is bolled, the second device is fitted on the plow. This device is a long bar of wood from which hang wooden blocks several inches in length. These blocks are attached to the long bar by heavy twine. As the plow passes down the cotton row, the blocks brush against the cotton.

Agricultural experts who have made a study of fighting the boll weevil state that kerosene oil is the best preventative. They have also noticed that where there is a path through the cotton field, where the cotton stalks are constantly brushed, more cotton is raised than in the remainder of the field.

Mr. Griffin has applied both these principles in his invention and the farmers of Spalding county state that they are going to give it a thorough trial during this season.

ENGINEER ATTACKS TWO SHOALS BIDS

Washington, March 23.—Henry Ford's offer for purchase and lease of the government's war initiated properties at Muscle Shoals, Ala., and that of the Alabama Power company for lease and operation of the power projects there are attacked by J. E. Levering, a consulting engineer of Los Angeles, Cal., in a statement filed today with the house military committee at its request.

Summarizing the Ford proposal, Mr. Levering says first that "it requires the completion of dam No. 3, which is uncertain" from an engineering standpoint in the second instance, he declares, "it requires the government to litigate the title to Gorgas steam plant and transmission lines before it becomes operative. This means delay and the ruin of nitrate plant No. 2."

Other criticisms of the offer contained in the statement are:

"The Ford tender does not provide for increasing the nitrate supply. The first right to the power would be vested in the Ford industries.

"Under the tender the government would bear the burden of maintenance.

"This tender will cost the government more than $50,000,000 and if dam No 3 is not successful there would be little chance of recapturing the property or amortizing the investment.

"Mr. Ford makes this tender as a dear friend of the farmers from whom he has acquired millions of dollars. Should he get possession of their fertilizer supply they will realize that he is the 'dearest friend' they ever had."

Regarding the offer of the Alabama Power company, the statement says: "I am impressed that the Alabama Power company should either modify its contract or meet the charge that it is an enemy corporation and its contract is against public policy."

Mr Levering asserted that the Wilson dam would distinguish itself as a permanent improvement rather than a temporary war measure. He says Mr. Ford's tender asks "for a deed to the greater part of this property and a perpetual lease for the remainder, for the avowed purpose of converting it into an automobile factory or other Ford use."

The power company, the statement adds, "asks it as a gift to make it a part of their light and power plant. Under the laws of Alabama they would be in a position to compel its citizens to pay interest on this large investment that cost them nothing."

DUKES TO RUN FOR STATE SENATE

Savannah, Ga., March 23.—(Special.)—J. P. Dukes, an attorney of Pembroke, has announced to friends his intention of entering the race for the state senate—to represent the first senatorial district. The district comprises the counties of Chatham, Bryan and Effingham. Chatham now has the senator, John E. Foy.

Mr. Duke is said to be basing his campaign largely upon opposition to the cattle tick eradication law. He declares that it has cost far more than the good accomplished amounts to. In Bryan and Effingham counties considerable opposition was at first apparent to the dipping law when it was made effective.

U. S. TICK INSPECTOR SHOT FROM AMBUSH

Batesville, Ark., March 23.—Further acts of outlawry here by opponents of the cattle dipping laws came to light today during an investigation into the death of Charles Jeffrey, federal tick inspector, who was shot and killed from ambush Monday, when Henry Hageman, also a tick inspector, reported that his barn was destroyed by fire of incendiary origin and that he had been warned to discontinue his work or his life would be in danger.

Six men are under arrest in connection with Jeffrey's death.

500 ATLANTANS WILL HEAR ROGER BABSON

More than 500 of Atlanta's representative business men are expecvted to hear an address from Roger Babson, statistician and economist, who will speak in the assembly hall of the chamber of commerce at 12:15 o'clock today. More than 350 reservations had been made for the luncheon Thursday and chamber officials predict that at least 150 more will be present.

Mr. Babson comes to Atlanta under the auspices of the forum committee of the chamber. He recently started out on a lecture tour of the United States, but became ill in Birmingham, Ala., and was forced to cancel his western itenirary, which included the principal cities of the Pacific coast.

At a dinner entertainment in the Piedmont hotel Friday evening at 7 o'clock, Mr. Babson will be honor guest of the Presidents club and the directors and former presidents of the chamber of commerce. His subject will consist of a general discussion of economic conditions of this country at the present time.

In order to make room for the large attendance expected at the noonday meeting, the front offices of the chamber will be cleared of all furnishings and tables placed within.

FARMERS TO HOLD MASS MEETING TO ORGANIZE

LaGrange, Ga., March 23.—(Special.)—A mass meeting of Troup county farmers will be held in the courthouse in LaGrange county Saturday, at which time M. F. Gaddis, county demonstration agent, will organize the farmers of the county for the purpose of systematic and co-operative marketing of trucks, fruits and other farm products.

M. C. Gay, director of educational marketing, of Athens, and J. B. White, representing the North American Fruit exchange, and who is located at Valdosta, will be present and address the meeting along their respective lines of work.

Since taking up his work as demonstration agent of Troup county two weeks ago, M. Gaddis already has perfected organizations in practically every community in the county, and the people are co-operating with him in every detail of his work.

TAX COLLECTIONS FOR MARCH SHOW $200,000,000 SHORT

Washington, March 23.—On the basis of reported collection of income and profits taxes of the March 15 installment, a shortage of $200,000,000 in the estimated revenues from these sources for the calendar year 1922 was estimated today by the treasury.

Original estimates of revenues from income and profits taxes for the calendar year, officials said, were $1,740,000,000, while returns from the March installment now indicate the total for the year will be $1,540,000,000.

Final reports of receipts for March will not be in hand before the end of the month, officials said, but reports received from collectors so far indicate that no more than $400,000,000 will be received as compared with approximately $728,000,000 for the corresponding quarter last year.

The shortage in tax collections on March 15, officials said, was due entirely to the business depression during 1921, the year upon which the taxes are due, as the new tax law did not become effective until the first of the year.

The expected shortage of revenues, officials said, would retard the treasury's program for continuing the reduction of the public debt as appropriations made upon the basis of budget estimates would have to be met by further government borrowing to provide the funds.

Secretary Mellon was understood to regard the drop in tax receipts as making it all the more difficult to take care of any proposed bonus legislation calling upon the treasury for financing.

"Spring Has Came" Weather Man Tells People of Atlanta

BY H. H. WIMPEE.

"Spring has came" at last.

This cheering information, long awaited, was handed out Thursday by Atlanta's sage weather prognosticator —C. F. von Herrmann.

Whether this news—if it is news—will cause a fluctuation of joy among the fair sex, who seemingly, were several weeks ahead of the forecaster, judging by the array of colorful tweed suits that have been noticed on Peachtree and Whitehall streets, is decidedly a matter of uncertainty.

To the tired business man that magic word "spring" instantly causes him to loll back in his swivel chair, place his number nines upon the desk and lose himself in sweet reminiscenses. Visions of golf, baseball or the forthcoming vacation is depicted in his mind.

The Woman's Viewpoint.

The weather reporter, in order to familiarize himself with some of the things that spring brings to the mind of women, took it upon himself to inquire of a few members of the fair sex.

"Just think," replied one, "I can wear my new purple suit and hat."

Another voiced the identical opinion of the first. They seemed to think that spring is only a made-to-order period for displaying their new raiments.

"I just love spring," asserted another. "Think of the lovely flowers and trees and moonlight nights and everything. It certainly is a relief to get out at night and stroll through the parks. I'm tired staying in or going to movies."

The light in the eyes of the fourth young woman sufficed to express her innermost thoughts and anticipations of the forthcoming balmy period. A friend of her's supplied the information that she was wearing a solitaire.

What Season is June?

"What kind of thrill does spring give me?" she repeated. "Well, you see," she began, "spring this year has a most poignant meaning for me. Isn't June one of spring's months?" she questioned, all the while focusing her attention upon the cold brilliant spark that emanated from the solitaire.

That constituted the weather reporter's acquaintance among the fair sex? He dared not ask strangers and still his question was unanswered. At least, with a really tangible answer.

Fair and warmer weather will prevail in this section Friday, the forecaster stated. By the end of this week the temperature will have climbed to the regular spring mark, which is between 60 and 80 degrees, Mr. von Herrmann declared.

Senator Harris Speaks Against Pacific Treaty

Washington, March 23.—(Special.) Opposing the four-power treaty, and outlining his position in support of other treaties negotiated at the armament conference, Senator William J. Harris said in the senate Thursday afternoon:

"I strongly supported the Borah resolution to bring about a naval disarmament conference. The republican leaders in the senate opposed the resolution until they realized it would pass the senate, as all of the democrats and many western republicans favored it. I am supporting actively the naval armament limitation treaty, as well as the other treaties growing out of the purpose for which the conference was called. Had the Borah resolution provided for a four-power alliance, or any such similar arrangement, it would have not passed the senate.

"There is a general idea that the four-power treaty is an integral part of the disarmament feature of the Washington conference. An effort is made to connect with disarmament everything touching the conference, as disarmament is favored by all. The four-power pact has no connection whatever with the other treaties negotiated at the conference, but its supporters are trying to make it appear so, in order to secure ratification.

Sees Alliance.

"The four-power treaty is an alliance, in my judgment, and one of the kinds of entangling alliances which this country has always avoided, beginning with the first warnings of George Washington. President Wilson fought to prevent such alliances for all time by the creation of the league of nations, composed of all nations. The four-power treaty is contrary to the ideas and principles advocated by Mr. Wilson, who almost gave up his life to end just such entangling alliances as this one—which history shows have always been breeders of wars.

"There is no way to compare a league for all nations with a league of four nations. They are different in purpose and in spirit.

"The republican leaders, with the aid of prominent democrats, are trying to appeal to friends of the league of nations with the same kind of sentiment as urged by the democrats when the league was before the senate. Because the republicans played politics with our foreign policies in 1919 and 1920 they are trying to show that every one in disagreement with them now is guilty of their tactics of two years ago. The democrats have sincerely supported the purposes for which the conference was intended and gave every encouragement to it. They did not offer any embarrassment to the conference, which compares strangely with the tactics of the republicans in 1919, who did everything they could to destroy President Wilson's influence in negotiating a treaty. The republicans have played politics with foreign policies to such an extent that they think everybody else is guilty of their conduct.

Bemoans Amendment.

"Senator Robinson offered an amendment, which I voted for. Practically all democrats supported it, but it was defeated by republican opposition. Had it been adopted, I and nearly all of the other democratic senators, would have voted for the treaty, as amended, or as a reservation. Under the four-power treaty, if there should develop any controversy between any one of the four powers, relating to their insular possessions; Far Eastern questions, etc., only those four powers would consider 'the most efficient measures to be taken, jointly or separately.' The Robinson amendment provided: 'If there should develop between any one of the high contracting parties and any other power or powers a controversy relating to said insular rights and possessions or to any Far Eastern questions which is not satisfactorily settled by diplomacy and is likely to affect the harmonious accord subsisting between any party or parties to this compact and any other power or powers, the high contracting powers shall invite all powers claiming an interest in the controversy to a joint conference, to which the whole subject shall be referred for consideration and adjustment.'

"If China should have trouble with Japan about the Island of Formosa which Japan took from China in the Chino-Japanese war; if Russia should try to recover her losses taken by Japan, and resist Japan's recent aggressions in Siberia, or if the Christians in Korea should try to regain their country taken by Japan, then under the four-power treaty the United States is bound to consult only Japan, Great Britain and France to settle the matter, although we are friends of those nations and people which are suffering from Japanese aggressions. If the views expressed in the Robinson amendment had prevailed all parties to the dispute would be at the conference, instead of a one-sided affair.

Not Like League.

"Some who have urged support of the four-power treaty insist that in principle it is like the league of nations. The opposite is true, in my judgment. It has none of the advantages of the league and all of the dangers feared by those opposing the league.

"Just after the armistice, in Manchester, England, Former President Wilson, said: 'You know the United States has always felt from the very beginning of her history that she must keep herself separate from any kind of connection with European politics and I want to say very frankly to you that she is not now interested in European politics. But she is interested in the partnership of right between America and Europe. If the future had nothing for us but a new attempt to keep the world at a right poise by balance of power, the United States would take no interest because she will join no combination of power which is not a combination of all of us. She is not interested merely in the peace of Europe, but in the peace of the world.'

"Nearly every speech made in the senate against the ratification of the Versailles treaty cited as a basis their opposition to alliances. Those of us who supported the treaty insisted, as did President Wilson, that the league of all nations was to prevent just such alliances of a few nations as the four-power creates. The republicans spoke against alliances then, but support one now.

Information Refused.

"Senator Underwood frankly admitted he had not heard of the four-power treaty until it was ready for signature. Last week, Mr. Sarraut, a French delegate to the conference, in the presence of Premier Poincaire, admitted he had not been consulted about it in the preliminary stages, and he was severely criticized on that account. When the first information was given out about the treaty, President Harding said it did not include the mainland of Japan. Such ignorance of the provisions of the treaty shows that a few questions about it are not out of place, but those in position to know decline to give us information. If President Wilson had made such a statement about the Versailles treaty it would have furnished a text for daily debate in the senate, while President Harding's statement has only been mentioned once.

"A simple request for information seems to offend Senator Lodge and other leaders, although Senator Lodge was very bitter in his denunciation of President Wilson about giving information as to the negotiations at Paris. It is a striking contrast. Secretary Hughes did not appear before the senate foreign relations committee. The committee declines to call him before them. President Wilson and Secretary Lansing appeared before the committee and were questioned at great length by members of the committee.

"Japan and Great Britain have had an alliance which is about to expire. Canada, Australia, New Zealand and other dominions of the British empire were opposed to a renewal of this alliance. Japan and Great Britain said their alliance did not apply to the United States. Supporters of the treaty say it was intended to end the Anglo-Japanese alliance, which supporters of the treaty disapprove. They argue that we should do away with a two-power alliance, but substitute this four-power arrangement, although Japan and England said their alliance was not aimed at America. Japan, Great Britain and France are already members of the league of nations.

Expects Ratifications.

"It is likely that the four-power treaty will be ratified, and in my judgment when the American people find out what it really means they will agree that it should have been extended to all nations.

"No member of the senate would go further in supporting measures that would bring peace to our country and the world. I would gladly support the four-power treaty if I thought it would accomplish peace. But, when history shows that such arrangements between a few countries have always brought about wars, and when all of our great leaders from George Washington to Woodrow Wilson, have opposed and warned us against just such alliances, I cannot give it my support."

DEBATE FINISHED, TREATY VOTE TODAY

cure administration acceptance of a second reservation extending the privilege of the treaty to outside powers failed during the day, despite the promise of the reservationists that such a concession would secure several more votes for the treaty.

Watson Raps Bryan.

Throughout the day and again tonight the senate galleries were crowded and long lines of men and women stood for hours in the corridors waiting for a possible chance of admission. An unusual attendance of senators heard the afternoon debate but a unanimous agreement that no business was to be done at tonight's session thinned out attendance on the floor to a handful.

The evening session opened with an attack on the treaty by Senator Watson, democrat, Georgia, who paid his respects to William Jennings Bryan for the latter's advocacy of ratification.

"It will be remembered," said Senator Watson, "that Mr. Bryan opposed the Spanish-American war and then came in a grandstand manner and offered his services to President McKinley. The president made him a colonel and another had to drill him for it. He went to Tampa, where he fought sand flies and mosquitoes in the most heroic manner and then when peace was made he came back to Washington wearing his uniform and succeeded in persuading enough democratic senators to vote for the Paris treaty to ratify it.

"One of the senators he persuaded was Senator Clay, of Georgia, who told me on his death bed that he regretted his vote for the Paris treaty more than any other act of his life. And any southern senator who now allows Mr. Bryan to persuade him will carry a similar regret to the last day of his life."

More than a score of senators took part in the last hours of the debate which came to an end automatically under a previous agreement when the senate finally adjourned tonight.

Making their last stand, the treaty's opponents marshaled all their oft-repeated arguments against the four-power arrangement as an "alliance," and injected several new issues that caused momentary sensations and led to bitter exchanges. A recent speech by Trotzky serving notice that the new international group should not forget the red army of Russia, was quoted by Senator Borah, republican, Idaho.

Charges Against Pastor.

Allegations that the pastor who opened the arms conference with prayer was compelled to omit the name of Christ were thrown into the debate by Senators Reed, democrat, Missouri; Hitchcock, democrat, Nebraska, and others.

In an arraignment of the treaty as a return to the old balance of power system, Senator Glass, democrat, Virginia, declared it was a step toward war, instead of peace.

For the treaty supporters Senator Lenroot, republican, Wisconsin; Kellogg, republican, Minnesota, and others insisted that no alliance was proposed, and that amity in the Pacific for many years to come would be insured by acceptance of the treaty. They argued that the opposition had misrepresented the terms of the treaty and the situation it would create, and asserted that rejection of the four-power plan would jeopardize the whole program of the arms conference.

Underwood Assailed.

Both Senators Glass and Caraway, democrats, Arkansas, assailed the course of their party leader, Senator Underwood, of Alabama, who was a member of the arms delegation and who has worked actively for ratification of the treaty. Mr. Glass declared the Alabama senator had made but a poor explanation of his position and Senator Caraway declared the leader instead of taking his democratic colleagues into his confidence had conferred regularly with the republican leader, Senator Lodge, of Massachusetts, and with President Harding.

During the two sessions today and tonight a new batch of proposed reservations were added to the half dozen already pending. They included one by Senator Walsh, democrat, Montana, for participation of outside powers in Pacific conferences affecting their interests. Senators La Follette, republican, Wisconsin, submitted six providing, among other things, that any signatory might terminate the treaty on one year's notice, that there should be no separate agreements among any of the four powers prejudicial to the purposes of the treaty, that the Anglo-Japanese alliance should not be renewed during life of the treaty and that the independence of the Philippines, when attained, should be respected by all the signatories.

ALLEGED KIDNAPING REPORTED BY FATHER

Athens, Ga., March 23.—(Special.) Homer Burt, 78-year-old white man, describing himself as a northerner looking for work in the south, told police today of the kidnaping of his two children, a boy, Nathan, 17, and a girl, Ethel, 16, who, he declares, were stolen from him by an autoist near Eatonton as the trio were en route here afoot.

Burt does not know the identity of the autoist. He declares he was in the woods at the side of the road when the car slowed down, he said, and the driver pointed a pistol at the children, commanding them to get in. When they took seats in the tonneau the car was speeded up and soon was lost to the sight of the father.

Continued queries finally elicited the information from an old colored woman, Burt said, that the autoist took a route that would lead him to Augusta.

The father said he could ascribe no motive for the kidnaping.

Market Leaders Consider Plans For Organization

Plans to wage a campaign throughout Georgia in the interests of the Georgia Farm Markets Federation were discussed at a meeting of the organization committee, held in Atlanta Thursday. A proposed organization plan submitted by J. S. Kennedy, member of the committee, was taken under consideration. An announcement as to the amount of stock to be handled will be made later, but a definite goal of not less than $500,000 was set at the Thursday meeting. A charter for the body will be sought at once in the Fulton superior court.

W. B. Hunter, president of the fruit exchange, presided at the meeting. The marketing plan has the indorsement of the County Bankers' association, and members of this association will handle much of the organization work.

The support of all civic organizations in Atlanta and throughout Georgia will be enlisted in the enterprise. A subcommittee of five will be named to conduct the campaign for funds.

Among those present Thursday were W. B. Hunter, chairman; C. C. Hawkins, of Americus; D. W. Boone, of Newnan; L. R. Adams, of Atlanta; M. W. Bell, of Atlanta; B. S. Barker, of Atlanta; J. S. JURY IN FARMER CASE DEADLOCKED

Summerville, Ga., March 23.—(Special.)—The jury in the case of Will Farmer, a young mountaineer who is charged with the murder of Langston Smith, a neighbor, on the night of January 14 last, had not reached a verdict at a late hour tonight, although the case was given to the jury at 5:30 o'clock Wednesday afternoon.

Farmer went to the home of Smith on the night of January 14, called him out of the house and shot him with a shotgun which he pressed against Smith's breast, and without provocation, after which Farmer rode away, being arrested two days later with his throat cut from ear to ear, it was charged.

State's Contention.

The state's contention was that Farmer's wounds were not inflicted at the time Smith was killed.

Farmer is about 22 years old. He has been in jail here without bond since his arrest.

Attorney B. E. Neal, of this place, and Rosser & Shaw, of Lafayette, represent Farmer, Solicitor E. S. Taylor and F. W. Copeland, of Rome, appearing for the state.

Stiles on Trial.

The case of W. R. Stiles, charged with the killing of John Hurt, a young boarder, about a month ago, was on trial today and attorneys having begun argument at 3 o'clock this afternoon. The case went to the jury tonight, but a verdict probably will not be reached before Friday.

Stiles claimed Hurt was killed by the accidental discharge of his own pistol, but the state contended that Stiles shot him. The case has attracted much interest in the county.

SIXTY-EIGHT MILLION DOLLARS

That's a lot of money, yet it represents the amount paid by The Prudential Insurance Company in 1921 to its Policyholders.

Suppose it was in silver dollars and you tried to count it. Suppose that with every tick of the clock you removed one dollar from the pile. Working for ten hours a day it would take you over five years to count sixty-eight million dollars—the amount paid to Prudential policyholders in 1921.

But carry the visualization further. Since its organization in 1875 The Prudential has paid over $748,000,000 to its policyholders. Counting at the rate above, you would be nearly fifty-seven years understanding what this huge sum totaled.

The Prudential pays its claims immediately, often within a few hours. This is the highest test of Life Insurance service.

"Adam and Eva."

(At the Forsyth.)

Clara Joel, the charming leading lady of the Forsyth players, presenting "Adam and Eva" at the Forsyth theater this week, is a great admirer and lover of domestic animals and owns some of the finest bulldogs and Persian cats in this country. One of the cats, named Blue Dragon, has carried off the blue ribbon at every cat show where she has shown and Miss Joel is naturally very proud of it and never tires of bragging about her wonderful Blue Dragon.

While playing in "Within the Law" at Albany, N. Y., not so long ago a lady of that city who had heard of Miss Joel's fondness for Persian kittens, invited her to her home to see what she claimed to be four of the finest Blue Persians in this country. One in particular was very beautiful and as kind and gentle as a cat can be. The owner of the cat held it up to her face and said, "Kiss mother," and the cat immediately reached over and started to lick her face.

This was too much for Miss Joel, so when she reached her hotel where she had Blue Dragon, she wanted to prove to herself this strange cat had nothing on her own little darling in either looks or sense. Now Blue Dragon was never noted for its gentle ways and when Miss Joel held it up to her face, after a great deal of struggling, and said, "Kiss mama," Blue Dragon reached over, but not with its mouth, but with a claw with a kick in it like a young lion and landed on Clara's cheek. Miss Joel laid off for one week and since then has always been willing to admit that other cats may be gentler than her own but never will she admit that they are better blooded than her cats.

Keith Vaudeville.

(At the Lyric)

Pretty Josie Heather, the former English musical comedy star, has headlined many vaudeville bills in Atlanta, but proof of the fact that she is a constant favorite and always welcomed here was furnished Thursday, when she drew probably the most prolonged applause ever accorded her by a local audience. Miss Heather is assisted by John McLaughlin and her "kid" sister, Bobby Heather, who looks like a boy and who sings Scotch songs with a charming burr.

Black and O'Donnell, the man in the role of a country bumpkin enamored of a stunning city girl, were also warmly greeted. Miss O'Donnell is one of the most strikingly beautiful women ever seen on the stage here, and her personality proves an able ally to her physical charms. The act, too, is fresh and spicy as to line and music.

"The Four of Us," comedy male quartet, were entertaining in popular numbers, accompanied by a highly humorous line of comedy. Lillian Gonne is a singing comedienne of the bobbed-hair variety, who does the "juvenile" stuff with great gusto, and the Perrettos, aerialists, wind up the bill with a thrilling turn.

Loew Vaudeville.

(At the Grand.)

Dorothy Sherman's "Cameo Revue," the headliner at Loew's Grand theater for the last half of the week, is a whole show in itself. It is one of the most pretentious acts of its kind that has been seen here this season, with elaborate stage settings and beautifully gowned throughout. One man and five talented and pretty girls combine their abilities in novelty dances, popular songs and well-executed musical selections on the piano, violin and cello. Saffie Badali, the Russian dancer; Ruth Moore, the soprano, and Mlle. Arline, the dancing violinist, made a decided hit with Thursday night's audience and were ably assisted in the sketch by Harriett Cuttis and Bee Leonard on the piano and violin.

Frank Cornell & Co. have a very funny skit in "The Joy Riders." The plot, if it could be called a plot, concerns the troubles of a couple and their flivver. The lines are very bright and the antics of the auto figure largely in the many humorous situations developed.

Other acts are Lester and Moore, singing and dancing eccentric comedians; Bart Doyle, "The Boy from Dublin," and Bender and Herr, who offer some sensational athletic feats.

"Fool's Paradise."

(At the Howard)

This wek the Howard theater is giving the motion picture public one of the best pictures that Cecil B. DeMille has produced for Paramount. Conrad Nagel, Theodore Kosloff, Mildred Harris and Dorothy Dalton are all featured. The gowns and stage settings in this picture are wnderful. Included in this picture are scenes of a Mexican Cantina, and from there one journeys to far-off Siam, where a castle and temple of a Siamese prince are seen. The temple includes the famous crocodile pit used by the Siamese in their offerings of sacrifice. This picture is full of love scenes and thrills.

"Polly of the Follies."

(At the Metropolitan.)

Constance Talmadge has one of her most delightful roles in "Polly of the Follies," the bright particular attraction at the Metropolitan theater all this week.

The story centers upon the girl who decides to decamp from the old homestead and emulate her thousands of sisters-of-the-gingham-gown in seeking fame in the city. The difference is that Polly actually manages to see Flo Ziegfeld and obtains a tryout for the Follies. After that her experiences furnish a new and original chapter in the life of the stage-struck honest-but-hard-working daughter of the soil.

GREEN NOW HELD IN MOULTRIE JAIL

Moultrie, Ga., March 23.—(Special.)—Timothy Green, arrested several days ago in Tampa, Fla., on a charge of murder in connection with the killing of Ed McWhite, in Moultrie several weeks ago, has been returned to this city and is now in jail here.

Green claims he was justified in the shooting of McWhite and will plead self-defense. He explained his flight by saying he "hated to stay in jail until court met," and asserting that he meant to come to Moultrie just before the April session and surrender.

Skinner's Matchless Art Well Shown in New Play

Otis Skinner never acted anything in any manner other than perfectly. To attempt a discussion of a performance of the greatest American actor, to sound his praises, to revel in his artistry, amounts simply to lily painting. Suffice it to say that Atlanta renewed its admiration of Mr. Skinner after an absence of half a decade and found that in the dramatization of Ibanez's "Blood and Sand" he has lost none of his charm and if anything has gained riper powers. A fine audience saw the opening performance at the Atlanta theater Thursday night and departed from the theater dazed by Mr. Skinner's art and the magnificence of the production provided by Charles Frohman.

We of the provinces aren't given productions like this more than once in two or three years. The splendor and faithfulness of the scenic investiture, the lavishness of the costuming, and the overwhelming ability of every actor in the cast served to bring home the thought that the distinction and a difference that marks the great artist isn't achieved by the artist alone but by the surroundings which his artistry inspires.

Tom Cushing's dramatization of "Blood and Sand" follows the Ibanez text closely. It is a terrible denunciation of the bull fight, but it is also a splendidly illuminating explanation of the causes of the bull fight's popularity in Spain.

In the course of the action, the peculiar social position of the feted toreadors—although they aren't called that in "Blood and Sand"—the attitude of the Spanish intelligencia towards the institution, the deep-rooted superstition that governs the lives of the bull fighters, their opulence, their temptations and their strength, are all shown us in a completely convincing way.

But, gentle reader, don't permit this play to be blighted in your mind by the thought that it is instructive and has a mission. There's one scene in "Blood and Sand" that makes Olga Nethersole's once famous ride up the staircase in "Sapho" as tame as a lap dog and as innocent as a turtle dove.

Times change. We are highly moral today. Twenty-five years ago, when we revelled in wickedness, that scene could have been staged only with an asbestos setting. In this day and time it simply brings to mind the fact that we can call a spade a shovel without causing blushes to rise and jeune filles to leave an audience.

The wondrously beautiful Catherine Calvert plays opposite Mr. Skinner in this scene. She does it as beautifully as she looks. They leave us gasping for a second and then our applause rings out unabashed. The movies, at least, have educated us to the point where we are not afraid to applaud those things that we appreciate.

Nothing short of a histrionic triumph was scored by Madeline Delmar as the wife of El Gallardo, the toreador. She is a little woman of tremendous tragic capabilities and she more than any other actor shared with Mr. Skinner the honors of the evening.

It was a source of pure delight to some of us who have worshipped at the Skinner shrine since the days of "His Grace de Grammont," to see that many of his talents have been inherited by Miss Cornelia Otis Skinner, his daughter, who does a comedy bit deliciously.

School Program For City Shown By Survey Heads

More than 2,500 people attended a mass meeting held in the Baptist Tabernacle of the Parent-Teacher association Thursday night at which Dr. W. L. Englehart and Dr. G. D. Strayer, members of the school survey committee, were the principal speakers.

Music was furnished by glee clubs from the Girls' High, Commercial High and Boys' High school, representatives of which were grouped in various sections of the Tabernacle. Mrs. R. F. McCormack, president of the Parent-Teacher council presided.

Dr. Englehart presented about fifty pictures showing lamentable conditions in the schools and telling how they would be remedied in carrying out the school survey plans.

Dr. Strayer explained the survey and how it was arranged as well as its object. He pointed out that the $4,000,000 on bonds voted for school improvement in Atlanta will meet about half or less than half of the actual school needs. He estimated it would take about $9,000,000 to bring the Atlanta school system up to the plane that a city of the size and wealth of Atlanta should have. He declared that Atlanta was one of the wealthiest cities of its size in this country and at the same time had one of the worst school systems.

He explained the benefits to be derived from the junior high schools as provided by the survey recommendations. He also called attention to the fact that the Boys' High and Tech High school are to be included in the one plant to be located at Tenth street and North Boulevard, which would be a considerable improvement over the old system.

PATIENTS NEGLECTED, SAY PROBE WITNESSES

he had never received instructions to deliver messages for Grady hospital, but had never refused to do so in the case of deaths, as the department wished to accommodate the hospital and the relatives of the deceased persons. He said he was not aware of any rule requiring him to relay death messages to the men on the various beats, but had always done so.

"Heard Lawson Call."

Miss Henderson testified that she heard Lawson when he called the police department the second time with reference to the death of Mrs. Schultz. Lawson's statement also was corroborated by G. B. Slaton, night ambulance driver, who claimed that he was sitting in Lawson's office and heard the call.

Attorney Carl Hutcheson, representing the complainant, drew from Slaton the admision that he sometimes sleeps in Lawson's office. It was pointed out, however, that he always occupies a rocker near Lawson's desk, where he can be quickly reached for ambulance calls.

Charges that the hospital had been very reluctant in sending an ambulance for a dying negro who had been the victim of a train accident, were made by J. H. Kirk, a special officer in the employ of a railroad. Kirk stated that about a year and half ago he discovered a wounded negro at Marietta street and North avenue. The man was in a dying condition, he said, and he asked someone to call Grady ambulance.

After a considerable wait, he said, he went to the telephone himself and called the hospital, and was told, he says, that the railroad should care for its own injured. He then called the police department, and two detectives removed the dying man in an automobile. Four hours after that the Grady ambulance was called, he said, it arrived on the scene after the negro had already been taken away.

Dr. Moss Makes Charge.

Dr. J. T. Moss, of Riverside, testified to alleged improper surgical attention given a negro man in the early part of 1919. He also told of visiting an aged white man at the hospital who had undergone an operation for gallstones. When he examined the incision, he said, he found it to be in a very bad condition, and found evidences of gross neglect.

Mrs. Mamie Smith, of 322 East Fair street, who recently underwent an operation at Grady, told the committee she had suffered considerably because of carelessness in connection with treatment given her following the operation.

B. L. Foster, of 251 Ormond street, complained as to service rendered his wife by a nurse at the hospital.

Several other persons were present under subpoena, but owing to the lateness of the hour it was decided to continue the probe next week. Very few spectators were present, but the large number of witnesses and others directly interested in the investigation half filled the council chamber.

Superintendent Johnston had no counsel, but conducted his own defense, rising frequently to object to various parts of testimony.

Alderman W. C. Davis, of the seventh ward, served on the committee in lieu of Alderman I. N. Ragsdale, who had asked to be excused owing to illness.

Lecture by Bryan's Daughter Enthralls Atlanta Audience

Mrs. Ruth Bryan Owen, daughter of William Jennings Bryan and a noted speaker, was presented by the educational committee, Atlanta Woman's club, in a lecture at the Metropolitan theater yesterday morning, which was heard by an audience of fair size, but one scarcely worthy in number the interesting character of the event or the purpose it will benefit—Tallulah Falls Industrial school.

A woman of the world and traveler on many continents, Mrs. Owen combines with a most engaging personality a power of animating the imagination of her hearers which is remarkable. Her voice is musical and is used with ease, yet has carrying force which is surprising. Her gestures, usually broad and sweeping, are never hurried, but of a kind with the self-command of the speaker in thought, expression and manner.

Here theme was "Modern Arabian Nights,' in which she pictured some of the strongest as well as the most romantic figures in the campaign of the British and the Arabians against the Turks in Palestine, her facts supplied through her own experience and contacts while serving as a Red Cross nurse with the British forces.

She visualized for her hearers the country and the major operations of the campaign with their purpose, and connected them up with the same region in Biblical times, reciting also incidents apparently insignificant in themselves, which had yet important bearing either on the campaign or on the final aim of her address, which, of course, was international peace, world disarmament.

A clubwoman—she is president of the Miami Woman's club and a strong supporter of the organized work of women, she made a telling picture of the force behind the concerted desire of women for peace by comparing their effort with the effect of snow, wonderfully light in a handful, which, in quantity, was of sufficient weight not long ago to cause one of the greatest disasters in the history of the national capital.

Mrs. Owen was introduced by Mrs. B. M. Boykin, president of the Atlanta Woman's club, who was presented by Mrs. T. T. Stevens, chairman of the club's committee sponsoring the coming of Mrs. Owen.

Delightful music was an opening feature, Miss Frances Woodberry singing Nedda's song from Pagliacci, and Mrs. William Griffith and Mrs. J. H. Dobbs playing a duet on Italian harps.

Habersham Chapter Presents Double Operalogue Program

"Suzanne" and "Pagliacci," two of the most popular of grand operas, were presented in operalogue form in Cable hall Thursday evening, under the auspices of the Habersham chapter, before a large audience.

Miss Margaret Battle, a singer of wide reputation, made her debut in "Suzanne" with Edward Warner. Mr. Warner's scholarly interpretation was received with applause.

Miss Ethel Beyer, under whose able direction "Suzanne" was arranged, presided at the piano, and Mrs. Edgar Paullin told the amusing story of "Suzanne," which was based on an old man whose wife became addicted to smoking cigarettes.

"Pagliacci" was presented by the following:

Prologue, Harry R. Bates.

Act 1, scene 2, Ballatella, Miss Hazel Whitney.

Act 1, Sob Song, Baron H. Warner.

Miss Margaret Recht, director; Charles A. Sheldon, piano.

Mrs. Paullin read the book of "Pagliacci." Mr. Bates was heard for the first time in the well-known prologue which he sang superbly. Miss Whitney's rendition of the "Bird Song" firmly established her as a rare artist. The celebrated "Sob Song" was rendered by Mr. Warner by request.

Another double bill will be offered next Tuesday evening by a splendid cast. Loreley and L'Oracolo will be the offerings.

Splendid Cast For French Opera In Concert Form

Gounod's "Faust," which is to be given here April 29 by the Metropolitan Opera company, will be presented in concert form Tuesday morning, the 28th, at the Howard theater, the principal airs to be given by some of the most prominent local artists and the Howard orchestra, under the splendid leadership of Enrico Leide.

The bright and sparkling "Jewel Song," expressing Marguerite's delight over the casket of jewels, will be sung by Mrs. Grace Lee Townsend, who has for years been an outstanding figure in musical circles, and is gifted with a lovely voice. In addition to her position as soprano soloist in St. Philip's choir and her profession as teacher, she has accomplished notable results as director of singing in the Girls' High school.

Henry G. Rudolph, who has recently come from New York to accept a position with the Victrola department of Cable Piano company, will sing the lovely cavatina sung by Faust, "Salut demeure" ("All Hail, Thou Dwelling"). Mr. Rudolph possesses a voice of power and range. He, too, is soloist at St. Philip's cathedral.

Valentino's beautiful air "Even Bravest Heart May Swell," will be sung by one of Atlanta's favorite baritones, Foster Barnes, whose rendition of the prologue from Pagliacci was one of the outstanding features of the recent opera concert when that opera was so brilliantly interpreted. As president of the Emory Glee club and choir and concert singer he is popularly known throughout the south.

The trio, "Alorto! ou vous stes perdue!" will be sung by Mrs. Townsend, Mr. Rudolph and John Mullin. Mr. Mullin's rich basso is ideally suited to the role of Mephistopheles. This trio is one of the most inspiring and moving of all operatic compositions and makes a fitting close to a program of unusual brilliance.

Mrs. Earl Sherwood Jackson, than whom no reader is more admired in the city, will give the dramatic interpretation of the drama in her usual inimitable style. She will wear a charming "Marguerite" costume patterned after the one worn by Geraldine Farrar when she sang this role at the Metropolitan in New York.

Dinner-Dance Is Event At Capital City Club

An interesting social affair of Thursday evening was the mid-Lenten dinner dance at the Capital City club, the occasion assembling many distinguished visitors, debutantes, and members of the married contingent.

The ballroom was attractive with large palms, as the background for the individual tables placed at intervals around the outer edge of the room. Gracing each table was a dainty French basket filled with bright jonquils and other fragrant spring blossoms.

During dinner, which was served at 8 o'clock, Baisden's orchestra rendered a splendid musical program, and following this were the latest popular selections for dancing

Side Talks by Ruth Cameron

THOSE OLD GROUP PICTURES

Don't you love to unearth an old group picture taken anywhere from 20 to 40 years ago (you see I refuse to be more definite for fear of the conclusions you might draw about my own length of experience) and laugh over it, and grow serious, and smile and sigh, and smile again?

When I was visiting a friend the other day she brought out a group picture taken on a picnic to which we both went in 1900 or thereabouts.

Today's Fashions Sensible.

First, of course, we laughed. One always does, for one cannot at first see anything beyond the absurdity of fashions in 1900 or thereabouts (how nice it is in this year of grace, 1922, we have at last found fashions that aren't absurd!). Those pompadours and those hats perched on the very top of them at the most ludicrous angles! Those big sleeves, those skirts reachin; almost to the ground, and on a picnic too (I heard of a small boy the other day who on being shown pictures of his mother and aunt taken at that period asked: "But where are their feet?") Those high neck dresses and the funny, high collars with points on them that the boys wore. And we thought we were so smart! Can it be——I am sure you can complete that question for yourself.

You know, of course, when one turns serious over such a picture—when one begins to talk about what has become of this one and that, and the inevitable answer comes that one is unhappy and one is dead and one would be better so.

We Piece Together.

What a black picture! You will think my friends are most unfortunate. I do not mean to imply that the tale is all a sad one. Far to the contrary. The little slip of a girl beside me in the picture is the buxom mother of seven. The small boy with the blonde pompadour and the very pacific expression distinguished himself in the war. One man has gone to Trinidad to live, and another is rich and is going to be richer.

So between us we pieced together all we knew about the histories of those people who sat down before the camera on a day in June 20 odd years ago; and wondered about those with whom we had lost touch; and reminisced and said, "do you remember," and "I'll never forget the day"—until we looked up at the clock and found that I had overstayed my time and missed my car.

All on account of a faded old picture dug out of a closet during housecleaning!

An Idea for the Hostess.

I don't know when we had a better time together or drawn nearer to the spirit of the old days, and my friend has evolved an idea from the experience.

She is going to give a party to the old crowd sometime and she is going to ask each one to bring any pictures of the old days, snap shots, group pictures, penny graphs, anything. And then we are going to have a grand reminiscencing party.

Don't you think it is a good idea and one which any hostess of a similar gathering might well copy?

CHAMPAGNE GLASS NOW HOLDS MILADY'S POWDER

'Tis no breach of decorum to transfer a now useless champagne glass to milady's boudoir providing first that you transform the glass. Into the glass goes madame's powder, over goes a china doll concealing under her beruffled maline and gold lace skirt the ever-ready powder puff. A most charming novelty is this, especially for gifts.

WHAT'S WHAT

By Helen Decie

The present mode of wearing short, tight skirts only emphasizes the old-fashioned definition of a lady, "a well-bred woman who never calls undue attention to herself either in actions, voice, manner or dress." Nowadays it is this last that young girls, especially, seem to regard so carelessly.

A smart dress or suit is not to be condemned if the skirt length is reasonably short, but an overemphasis of the fact, obtained by crossing the knees in public, is not only a breach of true breeding, but the consequences of such an action bring immediate and deserved results. Nothing so lays a young girl open to the stares and criticisms of men as this frequently encountered posture. It will be of no use to resent such stares, for they are justly deserved. The girl who finds herself the object of comment by strangers in public only draws the fire to herself by her thoughtless and indecent exposure.

Who's Who in the Story.

Jeanne (Jane) Dare, beautiful, clever, but poor, resolves to stake everything to achieve a wealthy marriage, and after raising all the money she can through mortgages, savings and borrowers, sided unwittingly by

Henry Harrison, her childhood sweetheart and hopeless suitor for her hand, comes to New York and establishes herself as a woman of wealth and fashion at one of the smartest hotels, where she meets

Richard Canby, wealthy broker and man about town, who is attracted by her beauty, and introduces her into his set, in which are

Adele Parkinson, a young widow and former flame of Canby's, who befriends Jeanne, and Victor Barstowe, young, handsome, debonair, only son of a multimillionaire, whom Jeanne marks as her prey. He is instantly attracted, though he is considered engaged to Vera Dayton, a childhood acquaintance, whom his family favors.

The family objects to Jeanne, because she is without credentials, but she, indulging in one mad extravagance after another, despite the fact that Harrison has given her his last cent in savings, and taken her worthless property in exchange, wins them over, and is married to Barstowe. After a honeymoon spent on the Barstowe yacht, she returns to face her numerous creditors, only to find that her husband is not the heir to the Barstowe millions. Meanwhile her creditors have become insistent, and her modiste even goes so far as to send the bill for her trousseau to young Barstowe, but Jeanne intercepts the letter, though not without the knowledge of her father-in-law's secretary. Adele Parkinson loses all her money in a stock venture, and demands that Jeanne repay a loan she had made her before her marriage. Jeanne, desperate, appeals to Canby, but is refused by him unless she pays a hateful price. Quite unexpectedly one day she discovers in a secret compartment of the jewel case that Bonnicetti, the violinist, had given her for a wedding present a magnificent necklace of rubies. Her efforts to solve the mystery of their presence are foiled by Bonnicetti's illness, but they succeed in arousing the suspicion of her mother-in-law and Vera Dayton, both of whom are her enemies.

Jeanne wears the necklace to her mother-in-law's dinner-party, and it is recognized by one of the guests, a well-known jewel collector, as a famous Italian necklace, with a gruesome history.

The story of its history as told by the jewel collector, involves Bonnicetti, and the inference to the other guests is that the violinist had given her the necklace.

Adele that night demands her money on the morrow, threatening to tell Barstowe, as the alternative.

Jeanne, through a successful ruse, gets the pearls which had been her wedding gift, from the safe, determined to pawn them. In her excitement she overlooks a note from Canby, reiterating his price. This falls into the hands of Vera Dayton.

She gets enough from the sale to pay back Adele, and discovers that Harrison wants to marry the latter.

Jeanne, driven to the wall by her need for money endeavors first to pawn and then to sell her pearls and other trinkets.

There is an open break with Vera Dayton, in which Barstowe takes Jeanne's side.

Victor takes Jeanne to the home of a newly-wed college chum, and at sight of the pleasant little house, Jeanne gasps.

More and more Jeanne comes to find her young husband worthy of love and admiration, and a chance visit of some friends of modest means brings a curious longing for a simple home of her own and dissatisfaction with her present mode of living.

She finally succeeds in reaching Bonnicetti by phone, and the violinist asks her to call the following afternoon at his apartment and bring the mysterious necklace.

Jeanne visits Bonnicetti's apartment and gives him the necklace, at sight of which he faints.

On her return home she finds that her husband's family has returned unexpectedly and is waiting, with Vera Dayton, to see her in the library.

In the midst of her mother-in-law's accusations, substantiated by Vera, young Barstowe breaks in and champions Jeanne.

Jeanne is practically asked to leave the house, but Vic declares that he will accompany her.

He takes her to the little house which they had seen together a few days before. That night burglars break into the Barstowe country place and steal all the valuables including Jeanne's fake jewels.

Jeanne wears the ruby necklace to her mother-in-law's dinner-party where it is recognized by a jewel collector as the famous Ricci necklace which figured prominently in Bonnicetti's early days in Italy. Through a remark of Vera Dayton's, the idea is conveyed to the other guests that the violinist has given the jewel to Jeanne. The latter, driven to the wall by her need for money, pawns her pearls and other trinkets. Jeanne visits Bonnicetti's apartment and gives him the necklace, at sight of which he faints. On her return home she finds that her husband's family have returned unexpectedly and are waiting, with Vera Dayton, to see her in the library. In the midst of her mother-in-law's accusations, substantiated by Vera, young Barstowe breaks in and champions Jeanne. She is practically asked to leave the house, but Vic declares that he will accompany her. He takes her to the little house which they had seen together a few days before. That night burglars break into the Barstowe country place and steal all the valuables including Jeanne's fake jewels, thus saving her the revelation that she had sold the originals.

Installment No. 85.

Dick Canby did not come out that afternoon nor any afternoon following for the simple reason that Jeanne refused to allow him.

As far as Canby and his kind were concerned, she was through. Never again would she feel that false dependence upon luxury and wealth and so-called social position.

Canby accepted her refusal to see him with his usual equanimity. He only said:

"All right, Jeanne, if that's the way you feel about it."

"I am sorry but it is the way I feel."

"I suppose you're offended because I wouldn't make that investment for you, aren't you?"

"Not at all," she protested. "I am more grateful every day of my life that you refused me."

"Well I suppose there is no more to be said. I'm leaving for Cuba Monday. I felt as though I would like to square myself on that house-party matter, I've been a little sorry for the proposition I put up to you."

"You needn't be," Jeanne told him. "I've forgotten about it already."

"Youre pretty magnanimous," he grunted. "You're sure there is nothing I can do?"

"Nothing, thank you. Good bye and good luck."

When she hung up the receiver she felt that she was definitely shutting off that phase of her life. Never again would the Canbys of this world disturb her. Never again would she feel that he, or any man of his sort, was necessary to her existence. The scales had dropped from her eyes at last.

True to her word, Adele Parkinson came out that afternoon, but Henry Harrison was not with her.

"Henry will be along later," she explained. "At the last moment he was caught by an important telegram—that is, I suppose it was important by the look on his face. His eyes fairly popped out of his head, and he fled to the nearest telegraph station, leaving me standing at the corner of Seventy-second street, ecortless and without even enough money to come out by taxi."

"You came out on a train, then?" Adele laughed.

"My dear, it looks like trains and busses for me forever more. No more taxis, and as for my own car—that's a dream that went a glimmering a long time ago."

"Come and see my house," Jeanne invited

Adele looked around her curiously. "It's a duck! Is it really yours? Remember I'm dying to know what happened. I put two and two together after I called up this morning and I decided that you had been kicked out of the parental home. But what happened, really? Why did Vic bring you here? Are you going in for the simple life?"

"Something like that," smiled Jeanne "You heard about the robbery, of course?"

Adele nodded sympathetically.

"Rotten luck. I hear that your pearls were lost too."

Jeanne smiled to herself.

"Yes We lost everything, and I think I'm rather glad. It's a relief to be free of the responsibilities of wealth. I think I'm going to like it out here."

"It is the most amazing thing I ever heard of, but I can't say that I really blame you. It looks like a peach of a place to be happy in, and I have a distinct feeling that you are going to be happy, because I believe you have fallen in love with your own husband at last."

"I don't believe I ever denied being in love with him."

"No, but all the world knew you weren't; I suspected it from the first. Dick Canby suspected it. And most suspicious of all, was our garrulous friend Selby North. Oh, by the way—I ran into him at the station coming down. He is back from that western trip and he inquired most solicitiously about you."

Jeanne's heart sank. Now she was indeed without hope!

Selby North had come back and he would spread the story of her pretense through every club in New York.

There was only one thing to do, she decided, and that was to leave before Barstowe found it out; to drop out of sight and be swallowed again in middle western mediocricy.

The Housewife's Idea Box

To Renovate a Dustmop.

To give new life to your dustmop, put a large tablespoonful of concentrated lye into an old pail. (Be careful not to get the lye on your hands, as it burns.) Have the pail half full of boiling water. Place the mop into the pail and boil it for a few minues. Take it out and rinse it several times in clean boiling water. It will be as good as new. THE HOUSEWIFE.

AT WOMAN'S WINDOW

BY W. L. GEORGE

THE LONELY CITY GIRL

I wonder how many people, as they watch a young girl walk up the stairs of an office, or into a store, ask themselves if she is happy. She should be; she is young, perhaps pretty; her clothes are neat, even smart. At her age, happiness is almost a duty. But very often there is something else behind that attractive appearance; loneliness. The girl comes from a small town, or from a farm. She has been some months in the city, where she came to earn a living; she settled in the cheapest room she could find; she knew nobody; she was flung into city life like a pebble into a stream, and there she stays.

The girl has made no friends. She can make no friends. She might move to a boarding house, but she is gently bred, and shrinks from strangers. As for the men who make advances to her at the office or store, she is "not that sort of a girl."

Our welfare workers cannot help her much; she is afraid of elderly ladies born in another social class. The only person who can help her is the well-to-do girl of her own ge. She will not talk to a woman of fifty, however motherly; she wants youth, gaiety, the contact of girls like herself, who are thinking of pleasure and love. I see in my mind in every city a club half of whose membership is made up of rich girls, and half of poor ones. There are games, dances; young men are brought in by the girls who have a social circle. I wonder if it must remain a dream.

DRESS

BY ANNE RITTENHOUSE

Grecian Styles are Said to be Peculiarly Suitable to the American Woman.

Madeleine et Madeleine are showing a strong partiality to Chinese design. Even the cut of some of their new boleros and jackets is spoken of as distinctly Chinese.

Seashells and white coral beads are combined with open-work embroidery to trim this white crepe de chine gown from Premet.

Paul Poiret has gone back to Egypt for the inspiration of elaborate evening clothes. He also borrows from ancient Byzantia and Hindoostan, and adds here and there a touch that is said to be suggestive of the peasant costume of Breton.

Drecoll especially sponsors the middle ages.

Madeleine Lecroix emphasizes the spirit of Athens.

Premet and a score more of the powerful French dressmakers also show marked partiality for the spirit that we call classic.

The new tight sleeve is spoken of as Renaissance, and Molyneux and others seem to be enamored of the metallic fabrics that were so characteristic of Italian costumery in the Renaissance periods.

The Russian note has been sounded and is still sounding both in the cut and the embellishment of women's dress.

Here and there we still find among the new clothes something Spanish, and Persian inspiration is also said to account for some of the newest decorative ideas.

But this is not an unprecedented medley in fashion sources.

With it all the opinion has repeatedly been expressed by those who look to Paris for the original source of inspiration for the American women's clothes that the type of frock best suited to transplantation on this side of the Atlantic is the frock of Greek or classic spirit.

It seems best suited to the combination requirement set by our climate, our American type of face and form, and our national taste and habits.

You may not agree with this opinion. You may be so warm an admirer of the Moyen age style that you can see no reason why you, an American, should not adopt it as readily as French women.

Premet has made a rather happy blending of these different sources of inspirations. He has called here and there from the Egyptian and the Hindoo. She has taken up with the Moyen age sleeve. But through all her collection there is an adherence to classic tradition. Her clothes are Greek in spirit if not in detail.

Especially does she go back to Greece for evening dress design. This means usually sleevelessness, a straight neck line, a girdle placed at a not exaggeratedly low waistline. Sometimes she makes use of a waistline that is somewhat higher in front than in back. Her drapery is simple and distinguished. She does not indulge in the clumsy bunching of fabric shown in the collections of some of the French dressmakers that is certainly not Grecian.

The Premet evening frock in the sketch shows a style that is classic in spirit if not in the letter. The ornamentation, which is dominated by the line of the frock, and does not detract from its essential simplicity, shows a clever combination of the new open-work embroidery that is called English in Paris, and an applique of sea shells and white coral beads. These sea shells that Premet has been using for a good many months, despite the fact that they are spoken of as one of the new trimming details, are, be it known, not real shells, but bits of iridescent crystal blown to resemble tiny sea shells. The frock itself is of white crepe de chine, and the trimming is all carried out in pure white.

THE HOUSEHOLD

Edited by Anne Rittenhouse

ASPARAGUS AND SPRINGTIME.

In the spring a housewife's fancy thankfully turns to asparagus. Gone are the ubiquitous carrots and parsnips, turnips and canned tomatoes. Spring is coming, with summer to follow. And first among the bounties of these generous seasons is asparagus.

Look over carefully, and wash; then tie in bunches, being careful that the stalks are of equal length. Put into slightly salted boiling water and cook until tender, which will require about twenty minutes; drain and serve on thin slices of toast; pour over it a white sauce. Asparagus should be cooked in a porcelain-lined saucepan, or else in a bright, new tin saucepan.

Creamed Asparagus.

Wash and cut tender stalks into inch-long pieces; put to cook in just enough salted boiling water to cover. When tender, add a cup of cream or milk, and, if you use milk, a good-sized piece of butter, and a little white pepper. Have some slices of buttered toast in a tureen, pour the asparagus over it, and serve in small dishes, giving to each person a piece of the toast, upon which put the sliced asparagus with a spoonful or two of the liquor. If preferred, the toast can be omitted, but it is a decided improvement to the dish.

The French method of cooking asparagus is to immerse the stalks tied up in a bundle in boiling salted water, allowing the tips to stand above the water, so as to steam tender while the tougher portions are boiling. Cook until tender but not broken, and serve with melted butter, white sauce, or Hollandaise sauce.

The insurance company took no risk with this floor

THE Metropolitan Life Insurance Company wanted a floor that would be silent and comfortable and would look well.

Since fine rugs were to be laid in these offices, the architects chose a floor that would serve as an impressive setting for them.

They chose a floor with every one of these desirable qualities—Armstrong's Linoleum. It was the best and least expensive floor-comfort insurance they could buy. Cemented down firmly over builders' deadening felt, Armstrong's Linoleum is a solid, permanent floor that never needs expensive refinishing.

If you are planning a building of any kind, discuss the matter of Armstrong's floors with your architect, contractor, or with any good linoleum merchant. We shall be glad to send him data and specifications.

Marriage relations among the early Assyrians were subject to a strict code of laws, it is now learned from a valuable cultural document made accessible to the scientific world in a German translation of the cuneiform text preserved in the Asiatic division of the Berlin Ethnographical museum. The early Assyrian lawmakers had this code inscribed on a set of clay tablets, unearthed during the excavation of the German Asiatic society in Mesopotamia. By comparing this find with other prehistoric documents, the date of these tablets has been established around 1100 B. C., which would coincide with the reign of Tiglat Pilesar I. The rights and duties of married women and the punishments imposed for the infringement of these laws, form the chief contents of this book of laws.—Detroit News.

A Wife on Leave

by INEZ KLUMPH

Illustrated by MARGUERITE BEALS

Who's Who and What's Happened.

Richard Brabant, a successful young lawyer, has given a year's leave of absence to his wife,

Sally, hoping that she will learn something of life during that time. She begins by meeting

Keith Gilbert, always labelled "dangerous," and through him associating with New York's gayest crowd of celebrities of the artistic world, among them Lee Craig, a pretty artist; Guy Selden, a playwright, and Graham Browne, a financier. Gilbert makes no secret of his love for her, nor does

Patricia Loring, a modren flapper, make any secret of her fondness for him. Sally goes to a dance club with

Barbara Lane, who is an old-fashioned wife, and her husband and their guest,

Neal Calhoun, and there sees Gilbert with Patricia. Calhoun intimates that Gilbert is not a man whom Sally should know. Sally learns that her husband, who has gone west, has taken his pretty secretary with him, and is so piqued by the knowledge that she accepts Gilbert's invitation to a house-party at The Eyrie, his country place. The evening of her arrival she sees mysterious lights on the river and sees signals from the house. A strange man appears to arrest Gilbert for bootlegging, but he escapes to a launch on the river, taking Sally with him. Barbara and Andy quarrel about Sally. Andy does not come home for dinner, and Barbara discovers that he is dining at a neighbor's. On the launch on which Gilbert and Sally escape, Gilbert forces his attentions on her, and when she screams for help, Neal Calhoun comes to her rescue. Gilbert thinks Sally has betrayed him and swears vengeance. Calhoun takes her to Barbara Lane's home in the country for the night. Keith Gilbert escapes and telephones Sally, threatening to break into her house if she does not join him in the street. Patricia Doring runs away from home and joins Sally at her house.

CHAPTER XXXV.

At the Lane's Again.

Sally's proposed trip to her home in the New Hampshire hills was out of the question, since Patricia had come to stay with her. Patricia and her poodle, Susy, was no small problem—one was as erratic as the other.

Susy was a thorn in the flesh of Sally's Pekingese, Mr. Waddle, who bent all his energies on making her life as wretched as possible. Whenever he caught sight of her, he gave chase; grotesquely bowlegged as he was, he could get over the ground at an amazing rate of speed, and the distracted Susy flew, a streak of white and anguished dog flesh, to whatever have offered itself. Shrieking with laughter, Sally would catch up the irate Mr. Waddle and tuck him under her arm, where he would dangle, his black face thrust forward and his tongue hanging out, while Susy cowered on top of a bookcase or beneath a couch so low that the fat Peke could not force himself into her retreat.

Patricia sauntered into her room . . . radiant . . . to have her frock hooked up.

Patricia was as distracted as Susy at times; at others, Sally suspected that she rather enjoyed being the center of the limelight. Her father remained obdurate, but her mother, a fussy little person, who worshipped the proprietles, appeared at all hours to plead with the haughty Pats.

"I'll never sleep under my father's roof again!" Pats would declare, with dignity. "I'm going to lead my own life now—work or marry, or something!" Whereupon her mother would retreat in tears, and Pats would sally forth for a soda.

As a matter of fact, she was considering marrying Gibbs Hunter, the nice young chap whom Sally had met with her at the costume ball so long ago. He, too, appeared at Sally's, his frank young face looking unaccustomedly worried.

"She needs somebody to take care of her," he told Sally emphatically. "She can't be allowed to go rushing around, doing whatever comes into her head. She ought to settle down"

Sally smiled at that, though outwardly she agreed with him. She yearned to tell him that settling down was something more than a matter of having a minister perform the marriage ceremony. She had meant to settle down, too, when she married Dick Brabant, and now she was more unsettled than she had ever been before in her life.

The newspapers dropped the "liquor and drug scandal," as they called it, within the week—only the most sensational one still dragged it forth to the front page once a day, with new clues as to the identity of the "mysterious woman." Sally shuddered every time she read those words, but could not resist buying the paper.

One of its reporters had approached her, saying that it was known that she had been seen frequently with Keith Gilbert and asking where she had been the night of his capture and escape. She replied that she had been with her friend, Mrs. Lane, of Tarrytown, and had spent the next day at the home of her mother-in-law, Mrs. Stewart Brabant, of Greenwich. So irreproachable an alibi proved conclusive, and Sally inwardly thanked Neal Calhoun for providing it for her.

From him she had heard nothing. Doubtless she never would hear from him again, she told herself, and wondered why she faced that prospect with a bit of regret.

She missed Keith Gilbert, of course—his daily phone calls, the charming little surprises that he had arranged for her, the engagements with which he enlivened the days, left a great gap now that they were gone. The morning mail was never interesting any more, and if flowers came to the house, it was because she had ordered them herself.

Patricia again treated her as an old married woman, and fairly flaunted Gibbs Hunter in her face. Sally tried not to resent it, and found herself longing to box Patricia's pretty ears.

The attractive young person sauntered into her room one May afternoon, radiant, charmingly dressed, to have her frock hooked up, and Sally, whose maid had gone out for the day, performed the service for her.

"It's so heavenly—Gibbs and I are going on a bat; it's criminal to stay in the house," commented Pats, twisting her bracelets. "Oh, you've gone back to your platinum wedding ring, haven't you? When'd you leave off the jade one? It was awfully stunning. Tell me—did Keith Gilbert give it to you?"

"He did not!" exclaimed Sally.

"Well, you needn't flare up so about it. Why don't you go somewhere today, Sally? You look absolutely seedy. Run up to your mother-in-law's or somewhere."

Patricia gave a malicious little giggle as she contributed that suggestion; she knew quite well that the society of the pompous Madame Brabant was hardly what Sally would care for on a gay spring afternoon.

"Perhaps I'll go to see Babs," said Sally thoughtfully. "She's such a dear, and I've been neglecting her so. Yes, that's what I'll do; I'll drive myself up—I could make it by tea time."

Not so very long a trip to Barbara Lane's would hardly have been cause for anticipation; now, however, as she fastened her gown and drew a small hat down over her yellow hair, she was quite pleased at the thought of the little run into the country.

And it rewarded her. She loved to drive, and the little sedan which Dick had given her was in perfect condition, and responded perfectly.

Weeacre was delightfully countryfied—strolling across the lawn that sloped to the river, gathering great sprays of flowers from the gnarled old lilac bushes Sally felt as if the worries of the past week had slipped from her. She felt serene again, safe from the shadows that Keith Gilbert had cast across her path.

And when she glanced up and saw Neal Cauhoun coming across the lawn toward her, she sighed contentedly.

HOUSEHOLD SUGGESTIONS

To Renovate a Broom.

When a broom becomes shorter on one side than the other, dip it in hot water and trim with the shears. The result will be a broom as serviceable as new.

A New Use for Blotters.

If you have a number of kiddies in your household, you will find it a convenient idea to keep a pile of blotters in the sideboard drawer, and when anything is spilled on the tablecloth, instead of using a freshly laundered napkin to soak it up, use one of the blotters. The liquid will be absorbed immediately and leave a lighter stain than if a cloth is used.

Kitchen Lore.

The lighter the pastry, the more the flour is sifted.

Rice is delicious boiled in milk and served with sugar and cinnamon.

Hot unsweetened cocoa may be used instead of scalding milk in cup custard for those who prefer the chocolate flavor.

Add a teaspoonful of baking powder to old potatoes when they are to be mashed, it will make them light and creamy.

BEAUTY CHATS

by EDNA KENT FORBES

SMOOTH WHITE HANDS

The woman who wishes to cultivate smooth white hands must learn how to work with gloves on. No woman can do housework and keep her hands smooth of skin and free from stains. She can keep them much better looking than the average housewife is very does, for the average housewife is very careless about the appearance of her hands. I do not blame her, for the work of even a small house is quite enough to occupy all the time and strength of the ordinary woman. So those who cannot do less work must find some effective means of protecting the hands.

This means working with gloves, rubber gloves when the hands are in water and canvas gloves for sweeping, dusting and garden work. At first gloves will seem awkward, but in a week or less you can manage quite as conveniently with them as without. In fact, if the hands are prematurely old, if the skin is dry and wrinkled and the nails are developing ugly ridges you can turn your housework into a beauty treatment for the hands, by rubbing them full of cold cream or vaseline, or some nourishing oil such as olive or almond oil, or even full of plain white lard. Then pull on the rubber gloves and continue with your housework knowing that your hands are being nourished and kept youthful, and that when you are through your work and wash off the oil you will find the skin smooth, clean and soft looking.

After a little the hands will begin to grow younger in appearance and even the busiest housewife need not be ashamed of them and of her finger nails. The best part of this treatment is that it takes up no extra time and its expense is only the cost of two pairs of working gloves.

Spookey—As you are only 15 years of age there is no reason why you should be concerned about your figure being out of proportion. In a few more years your stomach will not seem too large and your feet and hands will have become more shapely.

It is not advisable for a very young girl to resort to corsets for improving the figure and the majority of young women do not wear corsets at all. They learn to stand properly and are usually supple—more attractive by far than a stiffly corseted figure.

Consider Linoleum

Think how practical it is—how durable and how pretty—for the newest designs in the best of linoleums, as shown here, really are pretty. The atrocities of the old "oilcloth" days are gone, and the new designs of such standard linoleums as Armstrong, Wilds and Nairns are really to be admired.

For hallways, breakfast rooms, bath rooms, kitchens and other uses, there is nothing else so eminently satisfactory and suitable.

For offices, too, there are designs especially made.

Linoleums in inlaid designs are priced, square yard ..... $1.50 to $3.00

The solid colors ..... $1.60 to $3.00

Prices include laying, except for the special cement process.

The Constitution's Novel-a-Week

The Valley of the Sun

By William McCoy

Next Week: "Peter the Brazen," by George F. Wortz

An enormous crawler tractor arrived one day, occupying a whole car. It was of the sort known on the desert as a cat, but this was a big cat. Rainbow Ben and little Tim Walters examined the 90-horsepower, 15-ton monster curiously.

"She's my baby!" Tim announced gleefully. "Some cat, huh? An' from what the chief says, she's goin' to have a brother er sister right away!"

And the "brother er ssiter" came, and the two ambled like ponderous reptiles over the valley, each hauling a full carload in its train of clanking trail wagons as they freighted material from Mirage to the side of the dam. Auto trucks were unloaded from the growing string of cars shunted onto the Mirage switch, and these also ground and rumbled their way up and down the valley, busily performing the service assigned to them. Other cars discharged mules, scrapers and all manner of grading equipment, while Captain Stanley verified the survey for the main canal which would hug the low hills to the north and serve the higher levels.

Jerry was puzzled by the work assigned to him, for without title or designation of any sort, he found himself Captain Stanley's assistant, his representative. Not as an engineer, of course, or even as a boss of any particular line of work. He drew the same pay the other former soldiers drew, was empowered with no authority, but the overworked chief could not be everywhere, and Jerry went here and there with his instructions, aided in this job or that when an extra hand was needed, and carried the reports of progress to Stanley.

IV—The Seed of Unrest.

Another light came and while Marjorie and all the others who had growing crops on their land spent every available moment cultivating to conserve the precious moisture, work began on the dam itself. Confident that there would be no floods, and with material on hand and prepared, Captain Stanley and his assistants, with the crew of Mexican laborers, began setting in place the forms of heavy timber which were to serve as a mold for the dam, and started to fabricate the maze of twisted steel which was to reinforce the concrete. Even though he was somewhat shorthanded at the dam, Captain Stanley started another crew to digging the main canal as soon as he had men enough to fill the needed quota. The former soldiers did not like to work with the Mexicans, and did not like to work by themselves—and their labor was needed on the canal. The second crew started where the canal would end for the project's first unit, just where it curved through the highest corner of Jerry's homestead and worked back toward the dam. The first crew, already well upon its way, worked on toward the second. But the work on the dam did not progress satisfactorily. The men found no fault openly with their wages, hours, or working conditions, but trouble seemed always luring just beneath the surface. As time wore on, Captain Stanley became convinced that the threatened trouble had nothing to do with wages or anything connected with the work itself, but instead was a manifestation of a mysterious force, and if possible to make it visible and drag it into the light of day, so that all might understand each other better, the engineer asked Jerry to spend more time among the men of the camp, to go among them in the evening. So Jerry's days grew even longer, and it was usually late before he reached home.

While still some distance from the house, as he was returning from the camp one evening, he saw Marjorie talking with someone in the glowing light of the lamp shining through the open door. A moment later he recognized Ramon, and saw that he was standing beside his horse, evidently just leaving. Without thought of intruding or spying, Jerry was on the point of calling a glad greeting, when Marjorie suddenly stepped close to Ramon, placed her hands upon his shoulders, and lifted her face to his—and Jerry turned away, swung Cal around and slowed him to a walk, and rode slowly through the night, alone with the desert stars.

Man and horse drooped with the weariness of a long day of toil, and many, many hours of wandering in the night. "I'm not jealous, Cal, no, not that," Jerry said to the Pinto. "I might have seen it coming. Ramon is my friend, comrade, he is as worthy as any man—and Marjorie has been true and square. I remember how she used to ride with him. She always sent me to Lenore. Yes, I might have known. And I am not jealous, not bitter—it is just that—losing both—Marjorie and Lenore almost at once—I wasn't ready for it, Cal, never would be ready, and something has sort of broken"—

For long he sat, his head sunk forward upon his chest. But at last he lifted his face to the stars, his heart crying out to them for comfort, and the spirit of the desert stars enfolded them. When the last star faded he turned his face to the new day, strengthened, comforted, and from the pinnacle of the lava hill where he had overlooked the valley with the old chief, that day so long ago when he had laughed his challenge to life and to the desert, he rode into the sunrise.

Trouble showed its ugly face furtively at the dam. The crew was steadily growing larger and the work went on in spite of a threat lurking just beyond the reach of John Stanley and his assistants—a threat leering at them from tomorrow. Well paid, happy and contented if left alone, the Mexicans were not being left alone—the seed of unrest was being sown broadcast among them, and was taking root in their ignorance.

"It's the I. W. W.!" said Tim Walters when Jerry took his worries to the little boss of the catskinners one evening.

"You're undoubtedly right," agreed Jerry, "but we're desperate for men up there. I'm suspicious of two in particular. One calls himself Wobbly Wally. The men call the other one Soapy Joe."

The day Marjorie and Jerry received notice that their proofs had been passed upon, and that the land was their own, was a happy one. Marjorie read her notification in the postoffice, while her heart throbbed with triumph. Taking the official envelope addresed to Jerry, and containing his notice she rode home quickly. In the bright sunset lights where he sat outside, she came up behind him, clapped her hands over his eyes, and asked him to guess the news, guess what she had for him. And even though he failed to name the answer, she at last gave him the envelope—but when he looked up from his perusal of the papers the radiant girl watching him made him forget his triumph.

"We've won! We've won!" she cried. "Even though we knew we had fulfilled the law, isn't it wonderful to know that we've won!"

"It is," he agreed, "and the first skirmish is over. We've really got something. The day the water goes on this land it will be worth one hundred thousand dollars an acre!"

"It isn't the value of the land in money," she interrupted, "it is—a home—and the promise of enough—even more than enough! The water means life—success! Oh, I have never felt so—so rich! I have—half a home and"—

"What do you mean, 'half a home?'" he broke in.

"Oh—that just slipped out—I just meant—something!" she blushed.

"I am just as happy over it all as you are," he told her softly. "That canal ends right in the upper corner of my cleared field. Even though the big ditch isn't done, they have already put in a headgate there—for the water I will get when the time comes. I will be the first man to get water! The others will have to wait for the laterals of the distributing system. That just happeend, of course, and I didn't think much about it until today."

Tim Walters and Frank Drake kept their huge cats purring contentedly, or roaring defiance to tons as they clawed their way from the railroad to the dam. But the dam was still the problem. The gates were in and the concrete poured to a height of nearly twenty feet, but it should have been thirty. The reinforcing steel was in place for many more feet, and the wooden forms towered empty above the finished work.

A crew of miners, long waited for, came at last. The dynamite and equipment for their work having arrived before them, they immediately began blasting the spillway from the gates in the dam to the end of the canal. The winter had been unusually dry even for the desert, and when the hot, dry breath of midsummer grew damp, sticky, old Rainbow Ben began sniffing the air and clawing his beard. A haze hung over the horizons, and crept with the passing days into the valley. A little black cloud led a trailing fleet of three others in an aimless cruise through the heavens. At last they cast their anchors about the summit of the tallest peak of the mountains of the west. Another fleet of clouds followed, and then a lone one sailed heavily up from the south to darken the western heavens—and Rainbow hurried to John Stanley.

"There's cloudbursts ahead!" he declared. "I been here a mighty long time, an' I kin read the signs! An' the signs is plain! Mebbe they'll miss us. But if one good burst comes down, any one o' them draws leadin' into the basin above here, that quarter-finished dam'll be plum-finished in jes' one minnit!"

"I know. We've got to pour ten feet more on top of what is there before we're safe!" the engineer replied, worried.

While the weather grew more threatening and unsettled every day, John Stanley and his assistants used every effort to speed up the pouring of the concrete. The two long trenches which were to become the main canal were so nearly completed that the crews could shout to each other. In friendly rivalry they worked faster and faster, and gradually became one crew.

Riding through the hot, muggy air of an afternoon, Marjorie stopped Cal below the dam, and from her saddle watched the men at work high above her on the brink of the northern wall of the canyon. She had recognized Jerry's figure, as he worked with the crew of the great concrete mixer, and was watching him when John Stanley passed, and stopped to speak to her, the eyes of the both following the men on the cliff.

A low rumble of thunder echoed hollowly above the clang and boom of the machinery, and when it died away a suffocating silence crowded into the little canyon. In wonder they looked at each other, and then at the crews above the dam. Every machine had stopped! Watching, they saw Jerry turn to the men, as if speaking, arguing. Then he stepped quickly to one side until the great concrete mixer was at his back, and faced a mob of two hundred who came rushing from every direction. While he stood alone, facing Wobbly Wally, Soapy Joe and the Mexicans and others crowding back of them, the various foremen and assistant engineers, unable to reach his side, gathered swiftly about the rock crusher.

"Chief! Chief!" a voice called, and Marjorie and John Stanley turned to find Hank Steele, foreman of the hard rock men, running toward them. "Somebody's robbed the magazine!" he told them reathlessly. "I just went after some powder, an' it's all gone! And all the fuses and caps! And when I got back one of the men showed me this!" he held up a bit of fuse. "They saw it fall from up there!" he pointed to the top of the cliff. "Those greasers have got it! They've got powder enough to blow the dam out of the canyon!"

Far down the valley the two winding links of the main canal had joined. When the last scraper full of dirt was scooped up and hauled out of the great ditch, the combined crews set up a cheer which startled the silences in their far hiding places, a cheer which doubled and trebled when they caught sight of a girl riding a great pinto—riding toward them with the whistling speed of the wind. A moment later she slid her horse to a stop among them.

"The Mexicans have struck!" she shouted. "They are going to dynamite the dam!"

The wind blowing his wisp of chinwhisker, one hand gripping the lines, the other swinging the whip, his four mules running as if from fire, a little old man careened up the valley, standing erect in a two-wheeled grading scraper. Streaming behind in a pounding roar of hoofs and rumble of wheels thundered a racing column of chariots—two-wheeled scrapers put to deadly use by the men who had just finished the canal—men charging to primal battle for their homes.

A great pinto horse flashed through the desert growths, speeding toward a gray ribbon of road close to the river's wraith where two Titanic, reptile-like monsters crept slowly toward the dam, each followed by a train of mighty wagons heavily laden. The pinto paused beside the leading monster, his rider leaned from her saddle—and a moment later strong hands had loosened the couplings and the two big cats, their cylinders roaring defiance, rolled on unhindered, rolled on toward the hill leading to the southern end of the dam.

"We'll get you!" threatened Wobbly Wally. "You and your kind do the dirty work for the money kings! You think you're better than we are! that the world belongs to you! You expect to get the land won by our labor because you murdered for money! You scabs in—"

Leaping straight for the mob, Jerry struck with all his strength, putting the lunge of legs and back into the swing of his arm and shoulder, and Wally crushed down, and stayed down. The mob hesitated, advanced, then, with a yell from Soapy Joe, fell back with a rush. Wondering, Jerry was looking for a weapon when an explosion close at hand stunned him for a moment. An instant later he saw that the engine which drove the concrete mixer had been wrecked, blown up.

As if in answer to a signal, a maniacal yell rose from the mob on the southern side of the canyon. They rushed them back, and soon a second explosion echoed the first, marking the destruction of the other mixer engine.

Lem and the others fought the mob from their end of the dam, the construction bosses and assistant engineers drove them from the rock crusher at the north end, but five score yelling demoniacs suddenly charged Jerry, intent upon throwing him off the cliff. He had to jump for the ladder leading down to the partially completed dam. Climbing swiftly down it, he jumped from above, and fell upon a Mexican madly rushing for the ladder, knocking the man down. An instant later he gripped him.

"You'll stay here with me," he said. "No! In the name of the virgin! No!" screamed the man, fighting madly to escape.

"So you've planted one down here, have you!" Jerry accused.

An instant the trembling Mexican looked into the other's eyes, then wrenched himself free and ran back over the soft concrete, dodging between the bars of the reinforcing steel. Following swiftly, Jerry came upon him kneeling over a box, cutting a long fuse with a knife held in a shaking hand. The knife's blade cut through the fuse, the man looked at the end of the piece cut off, and while he looked a vicious little spurt of fire shot out of it, and the quaking, ashen Mexican held it up to the man standing over him.

A mighty thunder of hoofs and clanging of steel came from the direction of the mouth of the canyon, and a frenzy of destruction gripped the mobs on top of the hill at either side. The boom of an explosion rumbled through the gorge, followed by the sound of rolling rocks and sliding gravel. Seeing the advancing chariots the Mexicans had blown up the road leading to the top of the northern hill.

The mob on the south side of the dam was smaller, and Lem and his men were holding their own with it when two great cats, predecessors of the tanks of war, suddenly rolled over the summit and advanced straight into the mass of struggling men. A scream of both fury and terror rang in from both sides, and the mob was trapped with the long, board-covered pile of packed cement at its back, of makeshift chariots clanging behind madly charging mules rushed upon them. The road was gone, but Rainbow knew that hill, and he had found a way. The Mexicans frenziedly met the charge with picks and shovels, but there were trained soldiers in those chariots, and the mob was hurled aside, and scattered. Their "revolution" answered, as it will always be answered, by the men of American homes. Soapy Joe and his confederates deserted their dupes, only to fall into the hands of Hank Steele and his hard rock men, who were looking for them. The "revolution" was over.

A united shout rose from the mob on the top of the cliff, for suddenly a line of the settlers in front, and the cats, their cylinders roaring defiance, crowding them closer, merciless, ponderous, terrible in their crushing power.

The hoarse cheers of the valley's men rang up and down the canyon, to be answered by a rumbling peal of thunder from above the far mountains of the west.

Youngsters Showing Real Stuff; Crackers Really Have Prospects

Carlyle and McClellan Are Showing Real Class. Old-Timers Will Have Hard Year.

BY CLIFF WHEATLEY.

Bay St. Louis, Miss., March 23.—(Special.)—One sees and hears a mighty lot about young stars in this training camp of the Atlanta baseball club where it had been supposed that age held a strangle hold on most of the lucrative positions.

This correspondent has just completed a twelve-hour residence in the spring headquarters of the Crackers' club. During that time he has eaten three meals with veterans and recruits and has seen a regularly scheduled ball game, the Atlantas handing a 12-2 licking to the Stanislaus collegians, the pride outfit of this community. Cracker recruits were mainly responsible for the victory. A rookie, Lee Bolt, did the flinging for the Crackers and accomplished a fine job in doing so. Rookies batted the ball to all corners of the lot, while the old-timers were forced to look on In the meantime the wise ones hereabouts, and there are a flock of them, are talking about recruits. We learned a lot from the taxi driver who took us from the station to the Klock hotel, where the candidates are quartered.

CARLYLE LOOKS LIKE A MILLION.

We were informed that Carlyle, "Dizzy," you will recall, of Oglethorpe university fame, is the likeliest looking piece of outfield material that has been uncorked at Bay St. Louis since the Crackers began these spring jaunts three springs ago. And we were told that Roy McClellan, a sandlot kid, from Savannah, was in for a place.

We restrained our curiosity about how "Dutch" Bernsen, Bill Rariden, Sammy Mayer, Erskine Mayer, Freddie Graff and many others of the old guard were getting along, and listened carefully to the words of wisdom being spilled by the flivver conductor. This afternoon we were given a chance to see just how recruits and veterans were stacking up. It was a great surprise to discover that most of the old-timers will have to work overtime to earn a season's meal ticket with the association that R. J. Spiller bosses back home.

We are not going to use last year's team as a comparison. Just like you, we want to forget that gang as quickly as possible. But the situation isn't hopeless. In fact it isn't half so bad as we thought it was when old man influenza freed us a few days ago for this trip to southern Mississippi.

REAL BASEBALL TROTTED OUT.

There was plenty of good baseball displayed this afternoon and we are told by those veterans of a million catfish slaughters, Messrs. Blake and Butler, that good ball has been on tap every afternoon on Stanislaus field since orders were issued for the players to open up. Bolt was putting nothing on the ball, under orders from the bench, we presume; but he was permitted to send speedy offerings across and proceeded to do so. He pitched during the early innings—five to be exact—and had the schoolboys dizzy before he was sent to the showers. He surrendered one run, but he could have gone a thousand frames without being scored upon had he elected to do so. He is a big-hearted brute and just let the boys score to keep their courage up. He was succeeded by Dewey Marshall, who went through four innings.

The heroes—you'll find them even in these exhibition games—were "Dizzy" Carlyle and Roy McClellan, and they are both recruits. Carlyle did just what he had always done since batting practice started—he led the hitting, and McClellan tripled with the bags loaded, a stunt he declared he would pull as he picked up his bat, and which won him the price of three wieners from the skeptical camp followers, who couldn't see him with a three-base swat to save their lives.

McCLELLAN REAL BALL PLAYER.

This Savannah kid is likely to prove the sensation of the camp, and to be frank with you some sensations must be offered before we turn any conniption fits over the prospects for the long campaign. The accepted idea, or description for a professional baseball catcher is that he must be a husky animal, capable of licking a cage full of wildcats with a couple of pugs thrown in for good measure, and size is about the only thing that'll cheat McClellan of his chance.

So far McClellan has been at bat four times. He has made three clean hits, and his one failure was a smash to the first baseman that came mighty near knocking out said fielder. He is a natural hitter, has more pep than a circus clown and is one of the old-fashioned ball players we see very rarely these days of the eternal dollar mark in America's pastime. But they say he's too little for a backstopping job, and yet Ray Schalk is no giant and Bill Killifer is far from being of a poundage that will rival Jack Dempsey's. It's a pity that physical defects should play such a big part in the fight Carlyle and McClelland are waging for positions with the Dutchman's outfit.

CARLYLE A NATURAL HITTER.

The former Oglethorpe star is the most natural batter we have seen in three years following Atlanta's cause, but the broken leg he sustained last summer in the Georgia State league is likely to prove a terrible handicap. Like the real fighter he is, "Dizzy" has shown no disposition to give in to Mr. John Injury, but he is working with the odds against him. Carlyle's batting will make Atlanta fandom forget "Red" Wingo, and already having a large number of friends in Atlanta, he would prove a big drawing card. If there were any method of picking a ball club by selecting the heaviest eaters as the best players, the Dutchman and his assistants would never complete their task, but this system isn't being used. The candidates we have viewed to date are great at the table, but we'll have to see more of them to determine if that ability extends as far as the diamond.

If condition is to decide the pennant, we should grant the Frankmen a chance. They have reached the "red" stage of their training. "Red" applies wholly to the color of the players' skins; later a beautiful tan will be achieved, but just now complexions resemble the nose tips that were popular in a wetter era.

REED TURNED DOWN COLD

The real tragedy of the camp hinges about Milton Reed. Milton came down to ask for a chance to make good with Atlanta, and he hasn't been given that opportunity. Reed is a player of proven worth, and a player of his caliber is usually given some other answer than "our roster is completely filled."

We take it that any team in the Southern league would consider Milton's application, and we are curious to know why his services should prove distasteful to the Atlanta management. He has worked out once or twice with the candidates and has shown ability that is beyond question. Making the Southern league grade is something this correspondent believes Milton would have little trouble in accomplishing. Anyway, it wouldn't hurt to give him the chance. Real players are not so plentiful—even in Bay St. Louis—that one of Reed's stripe should be utterly disregarded.

The rest of the week will be devoted to preparations for the strong Mexican Petroleum team that will be faced here next Sunday. This is one of the strongest semi-pro teams in New Orleans and the Crackers might get a beating.

RESULTS IN BASKET TOURNAMENT

The Intermediate Basketball league played two games last night at the Y. M. C. A. In the first game, the Grace Methodists won from the Gordon Street quintet by a score of 39 to 20. The second game was won by the Capital Avenue club playing Wesley Memorial, 26 to 19.

In the championship semi-final tournament games played on the Boys' High court, the Second Baptists beat the West End Presbyterians in a hard-fought game by the narrow margin of 23 to 21. The Argogs swamped the St. Paul's club by a 60 to 8 count.

The winners of these championship games will meet for the championship in the Sunday School league on Saturday night at the Y. M. C. A. at 7:30 o'clock.

OGLETHORPE VS. GA. TODAY

BY BILL MORROW.

With high hopes the Oglethorpe baseball team left this morning to clash with the Georgia Bulldogs in the Classic City. The Petrels will meet the Bulldogs in a two-game series and the players are primed for the encounter Until yesterday the personnel of the entire team was unknown, Coach Anderson having used several different combinations in the infield The first authentic line-up was given yesterday by the Petrel coach. The positions in doubt, shortstop and third base, will be held by Rutledge and Hafele. Rutledge started the season like a house a-fire, but slowed up after a few days. Coach Anderson recognizes in Rutledge real material and will send him against Georgia in his customary position, Coach hopes the Georgia game to be the making of this promising candidate, and is expecting it to be the fracas in which Rutledge will find himself Hafele is a veteran from last year's aggregation, and has played the hot corner in nice style. In the past he has been no weakling with the bat and it is the prevailing belief at the university that he will not fail to deliver in this time of stress.

The Petrel fans were a bit surprised when they learned that Harmon Partridge had been shifted to the outfield Harmon, until yesterday, had been stationed at third, where he had performed in fine style. The new change does not weaken the defensive element of the team, however, from an offensive standpoint, that the efficiency is greatly increased.

Bulldogs Dangerous.

Reports from the Georgia camp have is that the Bulldogs boast of an exceedingly dangerous combination. Already the university has taken the measure of two of Georgia's leading nines Rarely in the past have the Bulldogs failed to connect with the ball, and it seems that this year is no exception to the rule.

Captain Cody is back on the keystone sack and bids fair to eclipse his commendable record of past years. "Chief" has also delivered in fine style with the big stick. Several other of the veterans have repeated and Georgia looks exceedingly dangerous this early in the season. Pinch hitters on the Georgia squad refuse to play the "Casey at the Bat" act, everyone delivering when called upon.

Rubbing Squad On.

The rubbing squad assumed charge of the dressing room this afternoon, and from now on there will be plenty of rubbers. This is a distinct Tech feature Voluntarily Tech students report every afternoon and render whatever service possible in the line of massage.

Kid Clay was unusually mum as to the line-up that he would start the game with. He refused to make any comment whatsoever, but allowed the newspaper correspondents three guesses. One of the three follows: Morgan third; Ingram, left field; Barron center field; Griffin, right field; Edwards, first base; Hill, second base; Jennings, shortstop; Bratton or Palmisino, catcher; Collins or Allison pitcher.

Georgia Tech-Clemson Game Today at Grant Field at 3:30

Lidell Declared Ineligible This Year — Probable Lineup for the Opening Game.

BY JOHN STATON.

Clemson vs. Georgia Tech, that is the order of today. The game will be called at 3:30. In all probability Cochran will stand behind the pitcher and take the cussings. As far as Tech is concerned, the game will not be a nightmare, or even a pony, for that matter. Tech has worked diligently for the last two weeks and is now ready to take on anything. Training rules have been in effect since the early part of March, also the fellows are in good shape physically.

There's no denying that it is going to be an interesting series. The first series is always a good criterion as to the relative merits of teams. If Tech is to figure prominently in southern baseball this season, then it is necessary to get off to a good start by beating Clemson. This is not so easy, for the boys from South Carolina play real baseball.

Liddell Ineligible.

The faculty breaks some very bad news to the baseball team yesterday. It was decided that Liddell, a star on the team for two years, would be ineligible to play. This is one of the worst things that could have happened. Ed has been helping to fight Tech's battles for two years. You can always hear him encouraging his pitcher. He is never without some ready word of encouragement to give the rest of the players. From behind the bat he has directed the play of the team in fine fashion. Outside of these qualities he is one of the best catchers in the south. He has a wonderful arm, and it is very few men that ever stole a base on him. He is right there when it comes to laying alongside that old apple, too. He hit around .300 last year.

This year Ed is taking most of his work in night school and will receive his diploma in the commercial course when the class graduates in June.

TILDEN NOT TO MAKE TRIP TO ENGLAND

New York, March 23.—(United News.)—William T. Tilden, world's tennis champion, has decided not to go to England to defend his title in the tournament at Wimbledon this summer. Tilden is now playing in the national indoor mixed doubles in Boston and has a busy program of tennis for months to come.

The United States Lawn Tennis association announced through Julian S. Myrick, president, that the matter had been discussed with Tilden and the executive committee. The committee decided not to send any players abroad this year because of the expense and also because of the wearing effects of the travel on the players themselves.

Tilden was not eager to go, but was willing to make the trip if the committee would send him.

"Facing keenest competition in the Davis cup contest, the committee felt that it was its duty to safeguard the tennis interests of this country and to take no chances that might weaken the Davis cup team," Myrick said.

Tilden returns here next week for the national men's indoor tournament. He plays in the southern championship at Pinehurst, N. C., on April 10.

GOLF RECEIVIG GREAT SUPPORT IN GEORGIA

Moultrie, Ga., March 23.—(Special.) Southwest Georgia may go through another summer without organized baseball, fans here declaring that they were unable to interest five other cities in the organization of a six club Class "D" league. It is the third time that a vain effort has been made to revive the old Dixie league, which, during its day was one of the fast Class "D" circuits in the country. Moultrie fans declare that the men who used to put up a great deal of the money for baseball are now so interested in golf that they have lost much of their enthusiasm for the former game.

There are two golf leagues made up of teams from country clubs in six cities in this part of the state and the playing season will open on April 11. There are ten men on each of the teams and match games are played every other Thursday afternoon. The playing season extends through August. The Georgia-Florida Golf league was organized more than a year ago and is said to have been the first organization of its kind in the south. A second golf league was organized last June and it will be continued through this season.

LANDIS VISITS YANKS' CAMP

New York, March 23—New York Yankees at New Orleans consulted manicurists this morning and had finger bowls on the table in anticipation of a visit by Judge Landis, the big chief of baseball. Babe Ruth and Bob Meusel were especially refined as they had hoped the judge, seeing what fine boys they were, would lift the sentence of suspension against them.

However, Judge Landis, baseball commissioner, concluded his address at the Association of Commerce luncheon here without making any reference, even remotely, to his order of suspension against "Babe" Ruth and other professionals who went on a "barnstorming" tour last year.

Arriving in the city last night, Judge Landis spent the morning in visiting the training camps of the New York Yankees, at Heinemann park, where he witnessed the usual morning practice and conferred with various players, managers and magnates.

Since his arrival in the city, the commissioner has consistently refused to discuss his order of suspension againt the "barnstorming" players. There was a general belief, however, that he would touch on the matter in his address, and not a few expected him to relent and permit the players under sentence to begin the season with their teammates.

Judge Landis, in his address, paid a high tribute to the work of the American legion and made an appeal for "employment week," declaring he would willingly sacrifice his reputation and standing with the American people to be eligible for membership in the legion.

After witnessing the exhibition game between the New York Yankees and the New Orleans Southern association, the judge will leave here tonight for training camps in Texas.

AMATEUR LEAGUE FOR SOUTH GEORGIA

Waycross, Ga., March 22.—(Special.)—An amateur league baseball for south Georgia consisting of six or eight teams and with a season starting about the first of May and extending through the summer months was the suggestion offered at a meeting of the fans of Waycross held last night at the railroad Y. M. C. A. According to the plans outlined last night the south Georgia organization would be a strictly amateur affair, every member of the competing teams being residents of the town fostering the team. Invitations will be mailed to Brunswick, Valdosta, Tifton, Quitman, Douglas, Blackshear, Homerville and Jesup to send representatives to a meeting to be held in Waycross next Tuesday to discuss plans for organization and if posible to complete the formation of the league at that time.

Regardless of the outcome of this conference local fans are going ahead with the organization of a team and the city ball park is being put in first-class condition for the opening of the season. C. H. Tinsley has been named coach and captain of the local team and W. W. Allen manager. Negotiations are now under way to arrange several games to be played here before the opening of the proposed league. According to Coach Tinsley there is a wealth of material in Waycross and a good team is assured if the citizens will line up behind the project. Waycross has always been a good baseball town and a winning team is sure to be a drawing card in this city.

MIKE GIBBONS WILL TAKE GREB ON MAY 1

Legion Fight Show Next Tuesday; Battling Budd and Stribling Meet

Preliminaries Will Give Fans Real Action—McGowan and Dugan in Semi-Final.

BY MIKE THOMAS.

The American Legion boxing card arranged for next Tuesday evening at the fight club at Forsyth and Hunter streets is, without doubt, the classiest show that has been billed here in some time. While it is possible that the boxing fan will get as much action in the way of knockouts on this date as he did on last Tuesday, it is extremely improbable, because this last card was one of those that the boxing fans dream about but seldom if ever see.

The headline attraction between Battling Budd and Young Stribling is in itself enough to pack the club to the gunwales, because the skill of these two is known to every fight fan that has ever attended a scrap where these two appeared either together or in separate bouts.

These battlers have some previous meetings on cards at different times that are calling loudly for settlement. Each seems to think that he showed the other up in no uncertain way. These battlers will settle all arguments in this ten-round fight on next Tuesday.

BUDD WILL FIGHT STRIB.

Battling Budd fought the Macon flash in Macon a few weeks ago, and gave the youngster a wonderful boxing lesson, something at which Budd is an adept. On the occasion of their next meeting Budd has made the assertion that he is going to take Strib without any hums or haws or quibbling about it. He is going to show the Atlanta fans that have been watching him for some time past that his comeback is a real one, and that he is a fighter as well as a boxer.

Stribling has promised to come out of his shell and fight. This was one of the considerations that was fully discussed before the bout was arranged. "Pa" Stribling told the fight committee of the legion that there was not going to be any of this defensive stuff for his boy on the occasion of this scrap, and it was on the strength of this promise that the fight was arranged.

The same understanding as to the "no contest" ruling by the referee will be in force at this show, and Johnny Glenn has said that he is not going to have the slightest qualm about throwing every or any fighter out of the ring who is not giving the fans a run for their money.

The legion committee is careful in arranging fights in order to put fairly evenly matched men into the ring. They are expecting Johnny to see that they fight. This watching about reputation is not going to go in the future—it is a manager's privilege to refuse to match his man with another fighter who has his boy outclassed—and then have his youngster go in a defensive fight, expecting a draw, or with a shot of luck, a decision.

DUGAN-McGOWAN FOR SEMI-FINAL.

Kid Dugan, of Atlanta has been rematched with Battling McGowan for a six-round bout, the semi-final. McGowan kayoed Dugan in Macon a few weeks ago in one round, and Dugan has been declaring that it was a fluke of the purest ray serene, or words to that effect. McGowan thinks that he has the kid outclassed and he is going to attempt to prove his contention in this fight by another K. O.

McGowan in his initial appearance here made a good impression in his fight with Jack "Dempsey" Denham, losing the decision after showing that inexperience was his only drawback.

Billy Dale and Battling Bernsen have been matched in a six-round affair. Dale is a nice boy and coming along nicely. Another six-round go has been listed between Billy West and Dixie Walker. There is a question as to how the program will be started, and there is a chance that the time-honored battle royal will be dispensed with and a four-round bout put on in its place. The arrangements for this encounter have not been completed at this writing, but will be within the next few days.

Third Basemen Doped by Fullerton N. Y. Giants Take Lead With Groh

Problem for Giants to Have Groh Play Best He Knows Under McGraw System.

New York Giants—with an infield that gradually is piling up points and commencing to look like one of the old-time infields of the Long, Lowe, Tenny, Collins, or the Chance, Evers, Tinker, Steinfeldt, or the McInnis, Collins, Barry, Baker brand—assumes the lead in the dope on third basemen. The acquisition of Groh means that the Giants lead the Nationals by a safe margin. But there is a condition which must be studied later.

In the American league there is a tremendous scramble for the lead and on the straight dope Boston assumes the lead and Detroit crowds close up, with Cleveland and Washington so near that there is small advantage gained by any team.

There has been considerable shifting around in the last two years to fill third base positions, which are becoming more and more difficult and dangerous to play. The faster ball has made third basing a perilous occupation, and it will be easier this year with the ball tamed down as it has been. It has reached a point where the dope finds it hard to choose between the American league third basemen, who are closely rated together in attacking strength, which leaves little figure difference between the men because of the low position value of third base in defensive dope.

GROH NO SURPRISE AS LEADER.

There is no surprise in finding that Groh figures best among the National league third basemen. He has the attacking power, the defensive strength and everything that is necessary. But whether Groh will play that kind of ball for the Giants is another matter. He offers a problem in himself—which is McGraw's problem rather than ours—as our interest is in the team's success or failure. If Groh can play ball under the McGraw system and hold the standard he has set for himself in several seasons he undoubtedly is entitled to first rank. There are many persons who do not believe that he can or will play good ball for the Giants, but the dope can not take that into consideration and must count Groh as probably performing at his average.

ST. LOUIS LEADS AT THIRD.

There will be little surprise to find St. Louis in second place, but the high ranking of the Chicago Cubs and of the Boston Braves will be a bit of a surprise to a lot of people. This youngster Kelleher came forward with remarkable promise last fall. Under Evers he did not seem to be much of a ball player, but when Bill Killefer took charge of the team Kelleher suddenly blossomed out and hit up a gait that showed tremendous promise. Boston, of course, gets the rating on account of attacking strength. It is something of a surprise, too, to find that the Brooklyn team, which has had comparatively high rating for several seasons, slumps back. Johnston never was a finished third baseman and held his job largely through his hitting ability. He was way off his form last year and his fielding was too spotty and erratic to give him any standing. He can still hit, but the hitting is unsteady and comes in streaks, which is not good. He is not as good at third since Olsen shifted over to second. Crane cannot help him as much as Olson did, and there will be a lot of balls slipping through past him that Olson used to lay up close to cut off.

BOHNE PROMISES IMPROVEMENT

Bohne, who promises to be settled upon as the Red third sacker, is a very fair ball player with a promise of improvement, and Moran has reserve talent to brace the position if needs be, or if compelled to switch the team. Philadelphia is not strong at third, in fact shows little promise, while Pittsburg, which ranks fairly well up, has really more promise than real strength.

In the American league, since the disgracing of Buck Weaver, Gardner has assumed leadership again among the third basemen, but this year he drops back to third rank. However, from first to sixth rank in the American league really means very little, since the players figure very closely together. Gardner, growing old, has lost a lot of points off his best and it is not much of a surprise to find Detroit at the top, with Dugan ranking second.

Personally I am dubious about ranking Joe that high. It may be that he is one of those ought-to-have-beens rather than the great ball player we have all claimed he is. He has not delivered the goods or made good the great promises and predictions. He has another chance now, a chance to show that one of the reasons for his failure to come through has been the team he was with rather than any fault of his. Poor Athletics, they can stand any blame for anything.

There is just a chance that Jones overbit himself last season, and yet he has advanced so steadily and developed so consistently that he seems to belong in the .300 class normally.

South Must Take Industrial Lead By Concentration

Editor's note: At the request of The Constitution, R. K. Rambo, of John Silvey & Co., has written the following article. Mr. Rambo is one of the south's best posted men on the general textile situation and what he says regarding the need of greater efficiency in all branches of the industry is a timely warning which should be heeded.

BY R. K. RAMBO.

The fact that business conditions over the south during the past year and a half have shown such a marked degree of stability when compared with previous periods of financial depression has brought interested inquiry and comment from many of the country's most eminent statistitians and broad-visioned business men. This should be a matter of pride to every thinking man in this section.

While the situation—strained as it certainly has been—is one over which we can all rejoice, even though still mindful of our hurts, it is well to know specifically some of the facts which have contributed to the greater stabilization of our business conditions. Knowing these we will be better prepared to look intelligently into the future upon which the permanent up-building of the south depends.

Period of Progress.

Following the panic of 1873, the United States witnessed the most wonderful period of railroad building in its history. The south shared with the rest of the country in that development. Twenty years of building and financing spread a literal network of railroads over the land. Then came the panic of 1893 and this was followed by another twenty years of great development—this time along industrial lines. The south again shared with other parts of the country in this prosperity—in some ways it raced far ahead.

It was but natural that industrial development along those lines more closely associated with our great staple crop should grow most rapidly, and such was the case. The extent of this growth can best be given in figures taken from a report made last week by one of the largest and oldest cotton mills in the north, which after deploring the fact that the south is now able to produce cotton goods at lower costs than in the north, made this significant statement:

"The peril of the south (to the north) is that in 1900 it had 5,500,000 spindles; today the number is 15,940,000—an increase of 190 per cent. In the last twenty years the number of spindles in northern mills has increased from 14,700,000 to 20,776,000 or only 41 1-2 per cent."

A truly wonderful showing for the south. Practically 80 per cent as many spindles in operation in the south today as in the north. Few people know these facts.

And yet with wages from 30 to 40 per cent higher and with working hours much shorter in the north why does the south not forge ahead faster in this great industry than it does? The answer is "inefficiency."

Reach Markets.

Our railroads reach every market, our factories are equipped with the most modern machinery, but individual inefficiency lags. Nor is this entirely a fault of the operatives alone—it permeates whole organizations and all too often reaches farther up than would be supposed.

The south is now facing a period in its existence fraught with extraordinary possibilities. It is no longer a queston of home markets—it is world's markets that must be sought. The future of our industrial development lies in foreign lands.

Our industrial progress is linked up with foreign trade. We must strip for battle. The sixteen million spindles in our southern mills must produce in record time and with no let down in quality. Our salesmen must equal or excel those of our competitors. Our executives must watch every turn and angle of the business world and leave no stone unturned for mastery of the markets.

A Matter of Work.

Every natural advantage is with the south today—climatic conditions, cost of living, and nearness to raw materials. The only uncertain note is found in the personal equation. This must be developed to the utmost, for what the south has done in the past it can do in the future; but we must face the facts and knowing our weaknesses work toward overcoming them.

The present strength of the south is shown in no better way than in the fact of its quick recovery from the recent depression—a recovery that has led the nation—but we cannot rest on our laurels; it is time to act. Opportunity as never before is here—we must live up to it.

New York, March 23.—A renewal of the liquidating movement in March contracts today eventually extended to the entire list and the cotton market in the afternoon became quite heavy, closing 3 to 45 points net lower, with March the weakest position after having been at one time 49 points net lower.

The increasing discount of March under May came so close to a carrying difference that it was said by some if it should widen much further those who intended issuing notices on Friday might decide to transfer their accounts into May. An additional thirteen notices were issued on March contracts and about 8,000 bales remain to be inspected this month. Trading in March will cease at 12 o'clock tomorrow.

For a time a New Orleans wire forecasting prospects for bad weather again in the southwest caused relative steadiness in new crop deliveries on the idea that if any rain should extend into the eastern belt just now it would be especially bad for crop preparations, but there seemed to be very little outside support influenced by this news and the depressing effect of the March situation was soon apparent throughout the entire market. May contracts late in the day declined to 17.64 and July to 17.20, while October worked off to 16.84.

At the opening the market was one to 7 points lower on the clear weather in all parts of the belt. New Orleans and spot houses sold and Wall street and Japanese interests were buyers. Continued favorable Manchester news gave a steady undertone to the Liverpool market, where it was said that there had been some trade buying of new crops.

Without being noticeably influenced either way, the market was a trifle unsettled around midday by the announcement of a couple of suspensions in Wall street and the failure of a large New Orleans spot and cotton futures house. The latter were not members of the New York Cotton exchange. Throughout the day there was more or less selling for western interests on the persistent weakness in grain.

NEW YORK SPOTS.

New York, March 23.—Spot cotton quiet; middling 17.80.

PRICES ARE LOWER IN NEW ORLEANS

New Orleans, March 23.—Prices were lower from the opening today in cotton, the market sagging in a mild way. Not even the failure of the spot and future house of Shepard & Gluck, announced toward the end of the first hour of business, stirred the market out of its rut, although the firm in question did a large business, with a wire system in the south and connections with both Chicago and New York. Around the middle of the day the market was inclined to recover, but in the late trading new low levels were made under uneasiness regarding the mill labor situation in New England. At the lowest the trading months were 16 to 23 points under the last quotations of yesterday. The close was at net losses on the day of 9 to 18 points. May fell to 16.38 and closed at 16.43.

On the opening the market failed to make any response to better cables than due, sagging under the dry weather over the belt. Then the failure engaged the attention of traders, but the immediate results of the suspension were merely a drop of about ten points, excitement over the news lasting only a short time, after which the market came back about 10 points. Brokers generally said that Shepard & Gluck had surprisingly small commitments, considering the importance of the firm, and that this accounted for the quiet. It was considered that the transactions in other markets were chiefly the cause of the failure. Shepard & Gluck were the correspondents here of E. W. Wagner & Co. when that firm failed, and according to comment on the floor of the exchange, the troubles of the local firm date back to that event.

News, Views and Reviews

German Mark.

New York, March 23.—Germany's more serious financial and general economic position among the nations of the world found concrete expression here today when the mark fell to the new low record of 2.9½ 100's of 1 cent. The extent of this collapse, probably unprecedented in modern history, may be gauged from the fact that the normal of pre-war value of the mark here was 23.8-10 cents.

Selling of German exchange at this center has been unusually large recently at steady reactions, but offerings assumed most impressive proportions in the last few days. The increased liquidation, apparently accompanied by speculative offerings, was ascribed by informed interests as directly traceable to the demand of the United States government for payment of the expenses of its army of occupation on the Rhine. For this, a claim of $241,000,000 already has been presented to the reparations commission.

Yet another factor in the demoralization is the severity of the terms imposed on the Berlin government as a prerequisite to the granting of a partial moratorium.

BY DOW-JONES & CO.

Speculative element that is operating on bear side of market still clings to its position. Generally doubted that reduction of Northern Pacific dividend will have disturbing influence upon that stock. Reported new developments in rail situation likely to come soon.

Bank of England rate unchanged at 4½ per cent; New York federal reserve discount unchanged at 4½ per cent. Northern Pacific quarterly dividend reduced to 1¼ per cent.

I. R. T. applies to transit commission for increase in fare sufficient to return 8 per cent on valuation of $300,000,000.

Chile copper for quarter ended December 31, shows deficit after charges and depreciation of $1,481,862 against deficit of $1,059,890 in previous quarter, and $596,480 December, 1920 quarter.

Car loadings week ending March 11, 829,128, increase 25,873. Reports of 185 class 1 rails and 15 terminal companies show net operating income for January of $29,476,000, increase $27,968,000.

United States calls upon allies to halt reparations payments until its claim for $241,000,000 for maintenance of army on Rhine has been adjusted.

Liverpool Cotton.

Liverpool, March 23.—Cotton, spot in active demand; large business; prices unchanged; good middling 11.31; fully middling 11.01; middling 10.91; low middling 9.91; good ordinary 9.06; ordinary 8.56; sales 15,000 including 4,000 late yesterday, American 10,200. SHARP REACTION IN GRAIN PRICES

Chicago, March 23.—Sharp set backs in the price of wheat resulted today from heavy liquidating sales and from lack of any aggressive demand. The market closed weak at 1 to 4 5-8c net lower, with May $1.2 to $1.32 1-8 and July $1.17 1-4 to $1.17 3-8. Corn lost 1. 5-8@1 3-4 to 2c. Oats 1 to 1 3-8c, and provisions 5 to 20 cents.

After the close it was a general accepted opinion that one of the biggest holders of wheat had disposed of most of his line. A break to a new low record for German exchange rates was one of the factors which tended to unsettle confidence on the part of bulls in the wheat market and there were also reports current that Australian wheat which had been shipped to India was being resold to other countries.

Besides, domestic crop conditions taken as a whole, appeared to be favorable to the bear side of the market, notwithstanding advices from Oklahoma that the green bug pest was increasing.

Another influence which acted as a weight on wheat values was absence of any indication of important export business being done. Assertions that Norway was in the market for liberal May shipments of wheat and rye failed to bring about any late rally, and the close was at almost the lowest point of the day.

Corn and oats went down grade in sympathy with wheat. It was said exporters at the seaboard were offering to resell corn to domestic bidders.

Provisions were affected by the weakness of grain and were unresponsive to an advance in the hog market.

High Yield 8% Assured Safety

You Can Get 8% With Safety on Southern Investments

Outside of the South an 8% investment with assured safety is today almost unobtainable. Even in the South itself the rate of interest is falling rapidly, and we cannot tell how long we will be able to offer an 8% return.

Because of the shortage of buildings and the strong demand for building funds in the South, we are still able to obtain 8% for our investors on security of the highest character.

Miller Bonds are backed by a first mortgage on an income-earning structure, a first claim on its earnings, monthly payments by the borrower to meet principal and interest. Ask for illustrated descriptive circular of our latest offerings and for booklet, "Housing the South."

New York, March 23.—Bond prices eased perceptibly today from recent substantial advances. The investment demand fell away on continuance of high money rates and speculative profit taking.

Dealings in the Liberty series were large, but a majority of those issues closed at trifling declines. High-grade rails were not especially affected by th reduction of the Northern Pacific stock dividend, but the trend among underlying issues was irregular.

Mexicans were heaviest of the foreign division, reacting on denials of progress of negotiations with Washington. French governments eased, but French municipals were higher with Swiss sevens.

Active buying of Interborough Rapid Transit fives was the prominent feature of the local utilities, that issue rising 1½ points. Steel, oil and rubber bonds showed irregular changes. Total sales, par value, $19,496,000.

WIN ALL YOU CAN

You can win $50.00 without sending a subscription, but if you want to win $2,000.00 or another large prize, read the following:

If you send one six-month subscription to The Daily and Sunday Constitution at $5.00 and win first prize you will receive $500.00 instead of only $50.00. (Read second column in prize list.)

YOUR BIG OPPORTUNITY is made possible by sending two six-month subscriptions at $5.00 each or one yearly subscription at $9.50 to The Daily and Sunday Constitution, then if you win first prize, your reward will be $2,000.00. (Read last column of prize list.)

Either new, renewal or subscriptions to start at any future date can be accepted.

OBSERVE THESE SIMPLE RULES

1. The puzzle game is open to any man, woman, girl or boy, except winners of any previous Constitution Puzzle Game, employees, or relatives of employees, of The Atlanta Constitution. It costs nothing to take part in the game.

2. Answers must be written on one side of the paper only. You must also number each word consecutively, 1, 2, 3, etc. Do not write more than one "B-Word" with each number. Write your complete name and address on each page in the upper right-hand corner. Use a separate sheet to write anything else.

3. Only English words found in the English dictionary will be accepted. Obsolete words will be considered incorrect. Either the singular or plural of a word may be used, but not both. Compound and hyphenated words cannot be used.

4. "B-Words" of the same spelling will be counted only once, even though used in naming different objects. You can name each object only once; however you may also name any visible part of an object.

5. All lists of words must be mailed by March 25, 1922.

6. The answer having the largest and nearest correct list of words beginning with "B" appearing in the picture, will win first prize, etc. Neatness, style and handwriting will not have any bearing in deciding the winners.

7. Each answer received will be equally considered regardless of whether it is accompanied by subscriptions or not.

8. "B-Word" participants may work together in answering the puzzle. However, only one prize will be awarded to any one household. Prizes will not be awarded to more than one of any number of people outside of the family, where several have worked together.

9. The full amount of any prize tied for will be paid to each tied participant.

10. The winners will be decided right after the close of the game, by three judges having no connection with The Constitution, and participants entering the game agree to accept their decisions as final and conclusive.

11. The names of the prize winners and the correct list of "B-Words" will be published in The Constitution just as soon after the close of the game as possible.

SEARCH FOR LOST FLYERS FRUITLESS

Flying Boat From Miami Is Missing, With the Pilot and Five Passengers.

Miami, Fla., March 23.—An all-day search for the missing flying boat Miss Miami, with six persons aboard, had tonight failed completely to locate a trace of the craft. The Miss Miami left here at noon yesterday, with Pilot Robert Moore, and five passengers: Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence E. Smith, and Mr. and Mrs. August Bulte, all of Kansas City, Mo., and Mrs. J. S. Dickson, of Memphis, Tenn.

The plane was bound from Bimini, in the Bahamas, a 45-minute trip. A plane returning at 6 o'clock last night brought the first word of the Miss Miami's plight, reporting that she had never arrived, and that it was probable had been forced down at sea.

Four planes were pressed into the search today, and combed the coast and keys, returning at dusk. Speedboats were still plying the waters tonight.

Hope of finding the boat was fading fast, for a heavy wind blew throughout last night and airmen doubt if it is possible for the craft to withstand a rough sea long.

PASSENGER TRAIN HITS OPEN SWITCH, CARS TURN OVER

Washington, March 23.—Striking an open switch near Alberta, Va., 60 miles south of Richmond, the Seaboard Air Line's Midsouth special was derailed early today, five sleepers leaving the track and turning over. Passengers who reported the wreck on arriving here shortly before noon said no one was seriously injured.

The train which was bound northward from Columbia, S. C., and carried a number of passengers for New York and other northern points was traveling at a moderate speed when the switch was reached, Major W. T. Romaine, U. S. A., one of the passengers, said. The engine, tender and baggage car held to the rails, but all of the sleepers except the rear one went into a shallow ravine along the tracks. Passengers in the sleeper that stayed on the track assisted passengers from the overturned cars and all were brought to Washington on a later train, the Florida limited.

Orders to Search All Navy Vessels For Liquor Given

Washington, March 23.—All naval vessels except combatant craft arriving at the Hampton Roads naval base from foreign ports will be searched for "suspicious packages," under orders issued by Rear Admiral Rodman, commandant of the fifth naval district.

"Recently cases of liquor have been found concealed under the coal in the bunkers and under the tiered chain in the chain lockers," Admiral Rodman's letter of instruction said, adding "bills of lading and the cargo itself should be scrutinized for suspicious packages."

The order directed that where such navy ships were compelled to anchor in the stream before docking at the base, that "no shore boats" be allowed to approach the ship except such as carried authorized government agents, and it was further directed that an officer be kept constantly on watch on each ship against liquor smuggling, and that additional sentries be posted in port.

"The commandant," the letter said, "is determined to prevent the introduction of contraband into the United States through naval vessels coming within his jurisdiction, and upon any instance of such coming to his attention, the commandant will hold the commanding officer himself of the vessel concerned directly responsible."

WOOD REMOVED FROM CHILD'S LUNGS

Macon, Ga. March 23.—(Special.) Horace McIntyre, infant son of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. McIntyre, of Haddock, Ga., successfully stood a serious operation at a local hospital today, where surgeons removed a piece of decayed wood from the child's lung. The child swallowed the wood while crawling, about the floor of the McIntyre home and it became lodged in his lung.

CHANGES IN BANK OFFICIALS IN ALBANY

Albany, Ga., March 23.—(Special.) Among recent changes in the official families of Albany banks none is more interesting than that of the election of J. W. Parker as vice president and cashier of the Citizens First National, succeeding J. E. Foy, Jr., who has been cashier of the bank, and who now becomes a vice president.

Mr. Parker came to Albany last year from Pelham, where he held an important managerial position with the Hand Trading company which he left to become associated with the Georgia-Alabama Power company. He is regarded as one of the most progressive and successful of the younger business men in south Georgia, and is well-known throughout this part of the state. It is understood that Mr. Foy will devote most of his time to the interests of Foy & Shemwell, but also will give considerable time to the Citizens First National, one of the largest banks in this part of the state.

VATS DYNAMITED IN LOWNDES COUNTY

Valdosta, Ga., March 23.—(Special.)—It is reported here today that three dripping vats have been dynamited in the eastern part of the county. Tick eradication work in Lowndes county is almost completed and it was hoped by officials that there would be no more dynamiting of vats before close of the season as the county is to be declared tick free at that time. It is presumed the vats will be rebuilt.

Lacks Funds.

Valdosta, Ga., March 23.—(Special.)—With Valdosta's new high school building nearing completion, the lack of funds to properly equip the new school is a problem confronting the city board of education. The board has already purchased a part of the furnishings, but not enough to thoroughly equip the new building. Purchase of the remainder of the equipment will be postponed until the board solves the financial problems.

THE MYSTERIOUS MAN IN WHITE
CALL BELLE ISLE TAXICABS

Merritt Given Life Sentence In Murder Case

Douglas, Ga., March 23.—(Special.) Robert Merritt, found guilty of the murder of Walter Harper, today was sentenced to life imprisonment. He killed Harper, a convict in a Coffee county convict camp, in 1919.

Merritt was tried the first time in 1920 and was found guilty, receiving a life sentence. Appeal was made to the state supreme court and a new trial granted.

Flogged by Men Because of Alleged Cruelty to Sister

Athens, Ga., March 23.—(Special.) For alleged cruelty to his sister, Nora Kenny, Frank Kenny, of 134 Bryant street, says he was taken from his bed at 11:45 o'clock Wednesday night by a group of masked men, carried about three miles into the country to a place known as Newton bridge, badly beaten with rawhide whips, and made to walk back to Athens in his bare feet. When he reached home, his feet and body were bleeding from the lashes and the long trip by foot. The men, seven in number, are said to have broken down the door of the house in order to get their victim.

Kenny stated that the masked men, whose identity still mystify Athens police and county officers, threatened even worse treatment than that of Wednesday night if he did not have his sister returned to his home by 6 o'clock tonight. Kenny told a reported that he has not asked his sister to return as he did not instruct her to leave. He has reported the threats to police who will guard the home, in the hope of preventing further trouble from the men, whom Mr. Kenny says he believes to be of the Ku Klux Klan. The whole affair, according to statements made by Kenny himself, began Saturday, March 11, when he told R. A. Britt, then boarding at the home, that he would have to leave, whereupon his sister, Nora, declared that if Mr. Britt left, she also would leave. Mr. Britt left Saturday, and Miss Kenny left Sunday. They did not go to the same place, however, it is stated.

Kenny says that one day last week, Britt returned to his home and spent the night there, sleeping in the kitchen and was apparently drunk. Friends of Kenny confirmed his statement. Athens police and secret service men were notified of the affair early on Thursday morning and they began work on the case immediately. This afternoon, they reported that the identity of the men who took Mr. Kenny from his home was still unknown. Britt was arrested and is being held in the city jail. He refuses to talk to either officers or reporters other than to say he has heard nothing of the affair and to admit that he boarded with Kenny up until a few weeks ago.

Armour Daughter Is Dead, Despite Dozen Physicians

Chicago, March 23.—Gwendolyn Armour, 6-year-old daughter of Philip D. Armour III., died today from a form of septicemia after a week's illness, during which the millions of the Armour family, the skill of a dozen physicians and a host of nurses and the resources of the entire city of Chicago proved unavailing. Seldom in Chicago's history have such heroic efforts been made to save a life.

A week ago the little girl contracted a throat affection. The greatest physicians in the middle west summoned. A special staff of nurses was employed in the Armour home on Lake Shore drive.

As Gwendolyn's condition became worse city officials were appealed to and orders were issued yesterday to close all traffic on that section of Lake Shore drive. Special policemen were stationed all around the neighborhood to prevent noise. The homes of Chicago's richest were cut off from traffic communication.

Along toward midnight last night, it became apparent that the fight was a losing one, and the end came with the little girl's father—vice president of the Armour & Co.—ten physicians and six nurses grouped at her bedside.

You Can't Build Downward

All building is upward.

Dirt daubers build downward, but men do not.

Constructive work develops the constructive mind, and where that is active everything else goes up with the houses.

You can see this in any community where there is much building.

The less cain we raise the more houses we build.

PROSECUTION RESTS IN RICKARD TRIAL

New York, March 23.—The prosecution late today rested its case against Tex Rickard, sporting promoter, charged with criminal assault, after Herman Berch, janitor of the apartment house on west 47th street, in which the attack was alleged to have taken place, had been called to the stand.

Berch testified that after Rickard's arrest a stranger had led him to Madison Square garden and that there, Rickard, charging that some one was trying to "frame" him, had told him that if he knew anything to keep quiet.

Berch then picked out among the spectators Former Police Captain Dominick Reilly as another man who later had approached him after he had gone before the grand jury and questioned him concerning his testimony. Berch alleged that Reilly had said he was working for Max Steuer, Rickard's counsel, and wanted to know "what it was all about."

Denies Dismissal.

Supreme Court Justice Wasservogel denied a motion by the defense to dismiss charges of rape, assault in the second degree and abduction after the state had closed its case.

The janitor said he had seen Rickard outside the 47th street apartments of the promoter's friend, Walter Fields, on four or five occasions, but swore he never saw him inside. Later he admitted having noticed Rickard in the vestibule one afternoon.

In their conversation at the garden, after Rickard's arrest, Berch said the promoter asked him if he had seen him (Rickard) at either of the apartment houses. At first he told of answering "yes," but later on he said:

"I think I told him I hadn't seen him there."

Not Asked to Lie.

On cross-examination the witness said Rickard had never directly asked him to lie. He said Fields had given him tickets to boxing bouts at the garden several times.

Dr. William Travis Gibbs, surgeon for the Children's Aid society, testified he examined the girl last month and found she had been assaulted.

Judge Wasservogel announced tonight that he had decided to bar men spectators as well as women from the remaining sessions of the trial.

Women were barred at the outset because of the nature of the testimony, but capacity male audiences have been admitted daily to the court room.

The order was issued after several society women who were refused admittance protested against "discrimination."

A 12-year-old girl, chief corroborating witness for the state, admitted under cross-examination of Rickard's counsel today that she had forged checks and committed a burglary.

She also admitted having lied to policemen and truant officers who had picked her up at various times.

The child was the first to take the stand. Quietly, and without a sign of emotion, she answered questions concerning her past and also testified that her chum had friends among sailors who had asked her to visit the Brooklyn navy yard. Her admissions included statements that:

Some Admissions.

She had been placed on probation on a charge of absenting herself from school and being a troublesome and untruthful child.

That she had picked up a letter addressed to her employer, containing a check for $56, and had indorsed his name to it and cashed it.

That, while engaged in cleaning the office of Julius Berliner, connected with a cement company, she had noticed his check book, taken three checks, made them out for various sums to the order of a person who did not exist, signed Berliner's name to the checks, added the indorsement of the non-existant person and cashed them.

That she had been arrested behind a bath tub in a house she had entered on noticing the shades drawn and that she had taken some Jewish war relief money, but had not touched a child's bank.

That she had at another time forced a desk and taken postage stamps.

Often Out Late.

That often she had been out late at night; once she had been taken up by a "lady policeman" at Coney Island at 1:30 a. m. and gave a fictitious address in Nutley, N. J.

The girl, who said she had described Rickard to her chum as a good, kind man who gave her money when she needed it, told of taking her chum to the garden one night and introducing her to the promoter.

She added that she took the other girl to meet Rickard because she considered him "a good man of good appearance who would be easy to get money and eats from."

"Lots of girls worked men at the garden for money," she added. She denied having been arrested last summer for begging in the Pennsylvania terminal.

She charged that the other girl had met a young boy in the lonely sections of Washington cemetery in Brooklyn at night and that she had admitted wrong-doing with the boy to her. This, she said, happened before she met Rickard.

Harding Sees One Hitch In Reviving Mexic Relations

New York, March 23.—The only hitch in reviving friendly relations between the United States and Mexico is one of proceedings, declared President Harding in a letter to John Barrett, former director-general of the Pan-American union, made public tonight by Mr. Barrett with permission of the white house.

The president's letter, dated March 21, was in reply to one addressed him by Mr. Barrett in which the latter laid before Mr. Harding a summary of answers received from 141 representative Latin-Americans in 20 republics to the question asked of 200 as to what they believed the United States might do on its own initiative to promote Pan-American friendship. Mr. Barrett advised the president that, among other things, the following recommendation, stated in composite summarized terms, had been made by the Latin-Americans:

"Early recognition of Mexico by the United States on a basis consistent with the natural and unexaggerated dignity, sovereignty and rights of both nations, with concessions, if necessary on the part of both, inspired by that same spirit of conciliation and cooperation which characterized the United States and other governments at the recent arms conference."

In his reply, Mr. Harding said:

"Mr. Christian has handed me your letter of March 20, and I am frank to say that I have read it with very great interest. I am not at all surprised at the expression of sentiment in the Latin-American republics which your letter conveys. As a matter of fact, we feel that way here in the capital of our own republic. There is really no difference of opinion as to what is necessary to restore former friendly relations between our own republic and that of Mexico. The only hitch anywhere is one of proceedings. Undoubtedly both countries are of the same mind, excepting that we cannot arrive at a program which cures the whole situation in one complete program which is to be executed at one time."

FORD IS INVITED TO MAKE ADDRESS AT MASS MEETING

A letter inviting Henry Ford to speak at the statewide mass meeting to be held in Macon within the next two or three weeks in the interest of Ford's Muscle Shoals offer was sent to the manufacturer Thursday by Mayor Key.

The mayor is temporary chairman of the Georgia Muscle Shoals association, and it was in that capacity that he tendered Mr. Ford an invitation. He declared in the invitation that the turning over of Muscle Shoals to Ford for his gigantic water-power and nitrate development scheme would "do more to regulate rates in our country than all the commissions that ever have been established or ever will be established."

Paymaster General Of Marines Pays Visit to Atlanta

General George Richards, paymaster general of the marine corps, was in the city Thursday inspecting the local office. He expressed himself as well pleased with the management of the Atlanta headquarters, which is the central office for the southern states. Lieutenant Colonel H. C. Reisinger, head of the southern district with offices here, was able to report a large reduction in maintenance and operation costs.

General Richards is on the way to Washington after a tour of inspection through Haiti, Cuba and Santo Domingo. He stated that he was very favorably impressed with Atlanta and the climate of the south.

BUCHANAN GIVEN YEAR FOR DRUG VIOLATION

S. M. Buchanan, of Newnan, Ga., charged with violating the Harrison narcotic act, on trial Thursday morning in the federal court was sentenced by Judge Samuel H. Sibley to spend a year and a day in the federal prison. Buchanan pleaded guilty.

Inspector Nations, of the local narcotic office, arrested Buchanan in Newnan on February 23, at which time he stated that Buchanan sold him a drachm of cocaine and 100 quarter-grain tablets of morphine.

The case of Dr. M. W. H. Lewis, of Carrollton, Ga., who is alleged to have violated the narcotic law in 1920, was carried over until Friday morning.

Dr. Lewis is alleged to have sold morphine, in varying amounts at different times. One witness claimed that he bought narcotics from him on numerous occasions.

Boykin & Boykin and Emmett Smith represented the defense, while Clint W. Hager, United States attorney, was attorney for the prosecution.

Stribling Wins From Maloney

Macon, Ga., March 23.—(Special.) Young Stribling, of this city, knocked out "Spike" Maloney, of Nashville, Tenn., here tonight in the sixth round of a scheduled ten-round affair. Absorbing punishment like a sponge all through the struggle but hanging on with a great display of courage, the Tennessean was the recipient of many congratulations following the bout.

Stribling fought one of the best fights that he has ever indulged in, certainly before a Macon fight throng, and as early as the third round set sail to put over a haymaker. Rights lefts, stinging wallops to the mid-section and every other portion of Maloney's anatomy were sent home by the local lad.

In a semi-final engagement, Jack Denham, of Atlanta, knocked out Pat McGowan, of Dublin. The sleep-producing punch came in the fourth round after the gong had saved the Irishman in the third stanza. Denham fought a good battle, and after the first session, when neither showed anything to speak of, it was Denham's bout. The Atlantan hardly got warmed up before the affair was a closed book. Crushing smashes to the mid-section and clean blows to the mug and head on the breakaways, caused the downfall of Dublin's pride. A right to the stomach was the finishing blow.

The program was witnessed by approximately 1,500 fans, who were wildly enthusiastic all the way. Five scraps were on the bill, and three of those resulted in knockouts. The first two contests, preliminaries, one for three rounds and another for four, were the only ones that went the full route. "Kid" Miller, of Atlanta, slated to meet Jordan Sheppard in one of the prelims, failed to appear.

Stribling's next fight will be with Battling Bud in Atlanta next Tuesday night, March 28.

NEW RESIDENTIAL SUBDIVISION PLANNED

A new residential subdivision to be known as Cascade Park, will be developed on Cascade road about one-half mile beyond the end of the West End car line, according to announcement Thursday by Fitzhugh Knox, real estate man.

More than 200 lots will be offered for sale. O. F. Kauffman, civil engineer, is dividing the tract, which is bounded by Cascade road, Avon and Orlando avenues.

A steam shovel is already on the ground to do necessary excavating. Fine bungalows will be erected at once, according to Mr. Knox.

Terms of Steiner Hospital Bequest Sent to Council

As soon as general council ratifies the action of the hospital committee in accepting the proposition of the executors of the estate of the late Albert Steiner to spend his $500,000 bequest to Grady hospital for a great clinic for the treatment of cancer and kindred diseases, actual construction work on the adjunct will be started, it was announced Thursday afternoon.

The clinic will be erected on property adjacent to Grady hospital at the corner of Butler and Armstrong streets, and will be known as the "Albert Steiner ward."

Agreement as to the use of the bequest was reached at a meeting of the hospital committee, executors of the estate and representatives of the Grady medical board Thursday in the mayor's office.

The executors agreed not to limit the scope of the clinic to the treatment of cancer, but stipulated that cancer treatment should be the principal feature of the branch.

Under the contract trustees of the Steiner estate, A. F. Leibman, Joseph Hirsch and Henry Wellhouse, are given the right to nominate the surgeons and medical staff for the Steiner ward and the scientists and X-ray specialists of the cancer department.

GIRL SCRIBBLES WILL AND JUMPS DOWN TO DEATH

New York, March 23.—Despondent because of ill health, Esther Davidson, 28-year-old office employee, today penciled a will on a piece of scratch paper and jumped from a twenty-third story window of The Times building Broadway and Forty-second street.

She fell upon a wire mesh over an eighteenth floor sky light and shortly afterward died in a hospital of a broken back and other injuries.

A shower of glass, tinkling down an elevator shaft when her body struck the skylight, attracted the attention of the building superintndnt, who found her in a sitting posture.

"How did you get here?" he asked.

"Jumped—but don't know how I summed up enough courage," she answered, then lapsed into unconsciousness.

Her penciled will bequeathed $25 each to two girl friends and all her other possessions to a sister. On the reverse side of the will she wrote:

"May God forgive me for what I am about to do, but the mental torture I have gone through for two months is unbearable.
